MEET TRAIN, FIGHT BLAZE IN BOX CAR

City Firemen Are Summoned to Pennsy Tracks as Lucas Man Sees Flames.

IT'S TWO-HOUR BATTLE

Spontaneous Combustion Is Blamed for Starting Fire; Loss Set 'In Thousands.'

The usual procedure of going to a fire was reversed yesterday when Mansfield firemen had a fire brought to them.

It all happened when a Lucas resident, noting smoke coming from a boxcar on a westbound Pennsylvania freight train, notified the tower man at the Lucas railroad crossing.

When the train passed, the tower man verified the report and called Pennsylvania officials here. They in turn summoned the fire department, flagged down the train and shunted it to a siding near the Empire plant.

On hand when the train arrived, company No. 1, under the direction of Capt. Paul Young found the car blazing from end to end. Due to the limited water supply they called for company No. 2's pumper while trainmen uncoupled the car and ran it near steel plant fire hydrants.

Laying more than 500 feet of hose lines firemen battled the blazing merchandise for nearly two hours before bringing it under control.

Pennsylvania railroad officials today said the cause of the blaze had not been determined but advanced the theory that spontaneous combustion might have started the fire.

They were unable this morning to place an estimate on the damage. James E. Young, agent for the company, said that two-thirds of the contents which included cotton goods, paint and metal fittings were destroyed.

The car, part of a loaded train en route from Providence, R. I., to Chicago, was carrying an assortment of merchandise. Claim agents investigating the damage said that the contents of the car was valued at "several thousand" dollars.

The train which was stopped here about 1:30 p. m., was held up for three hours, railroad employes said.

Braves Go After Third Victory at Fairgrounds Today

With two consecutive triumphs dangling from their belts, Mansfield Braves make their second home stand of the year at 8:15 p. m. today when they tackle the Tiffin Mud Hens under the arcs at the Fairground.

Another rookie, Dick Farkas, a righthander, will toe the rubber as the Braves battle to retain their share of first place in the Ohio State league race. Frank Kress and Bob Arnold worked on the hill yesterday as the Mansfield club scored a 6-4 win over the Mud Hens at Tiffin.

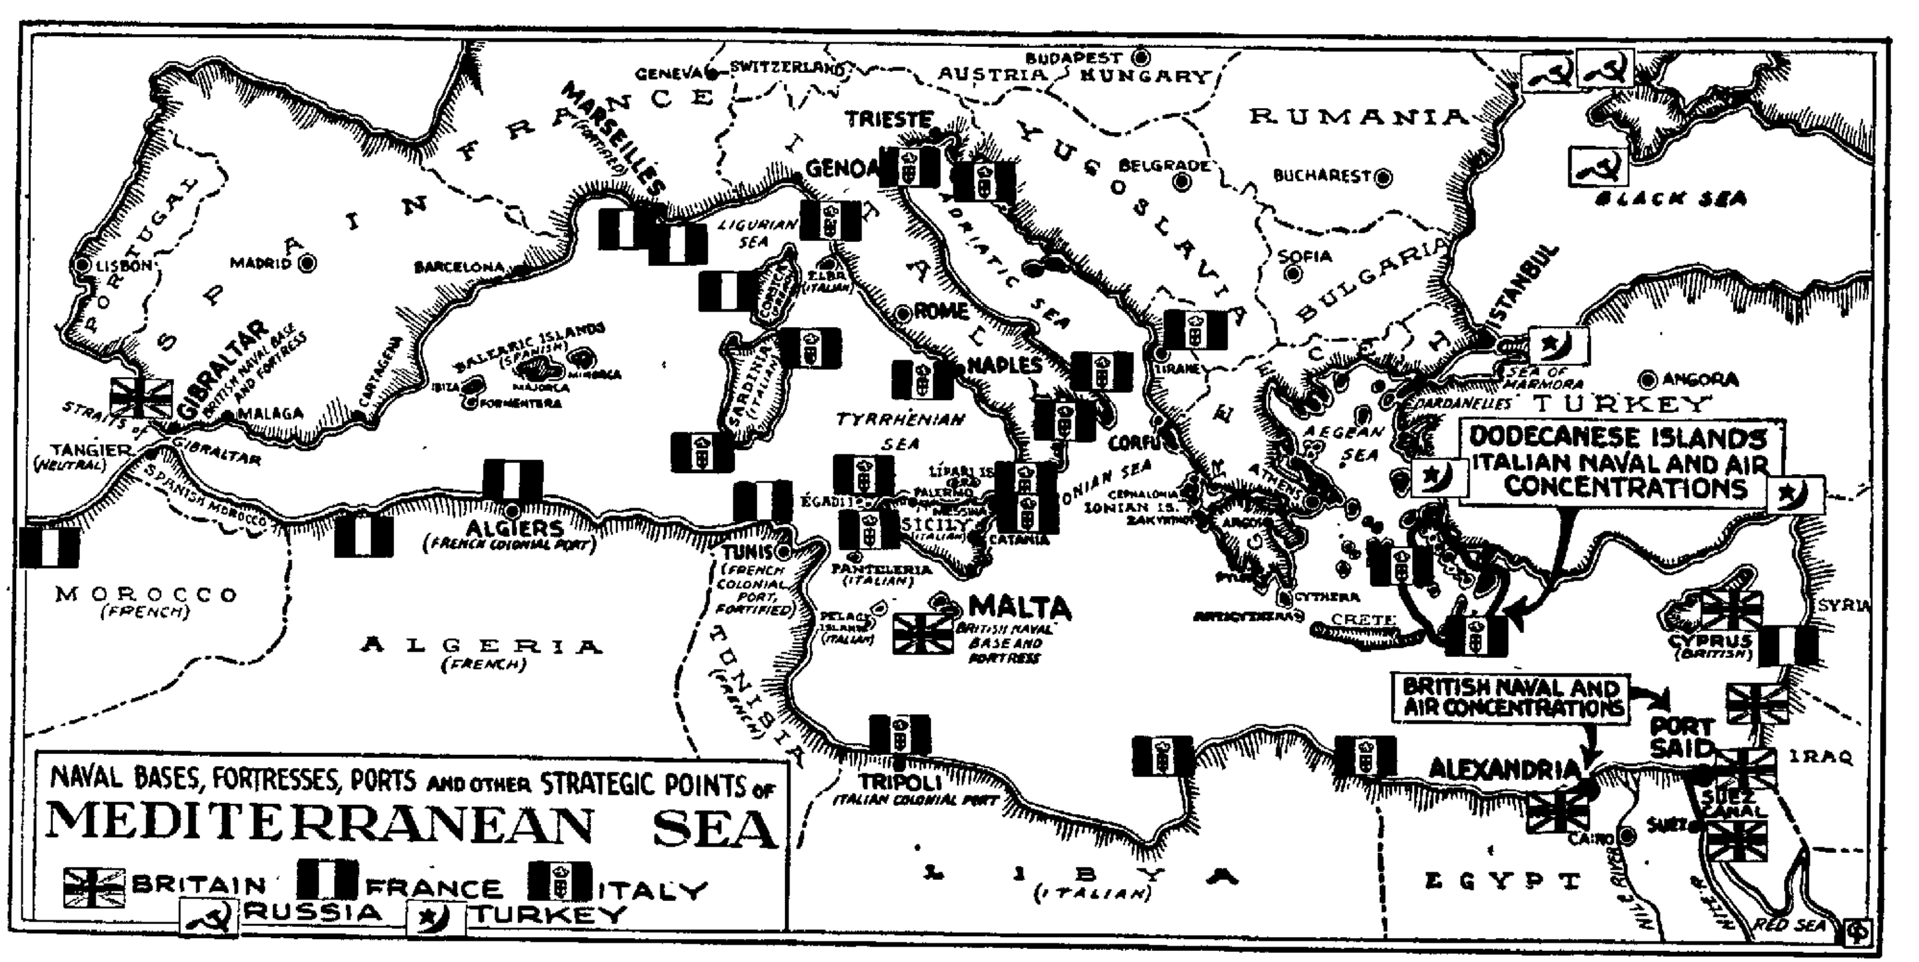
NOT TOO BIG

Crowd Turned Away as Town Opens New Auditorium.

EMPORIA, Kas. — (AP) — Some skeptics contended Emporia's new $613,000 municipal auditorium was "too big" for this town of 15,000.

The auditorium was opened with a religious program Sunday night. every one of its 3,800 seats was taken and church officials estimated 1,000 persons were turned away.

These Naval Bases in Mediterranean May Be Next in War News



This flag-dotted map of the Mediterranean shows how the Allies and Italy stand in case war should break out there or in the Balkan states. Indicated are naval bases and troop concentrations points. Fear spread throughout Europe today that the Mediterranean and the Balkans would soon become embroiled in the European war, as the Allies, defeated in the Norwegian campaign, moved to check any possible Nazi movement in a southern direction. Should this develop, the Allies fear Italy would join the war on the side of Germany.

HUNT MANIAC IN SLAYINGS

Pennsylvania Police Search For Tan Sedan Driven By Sex Killer.

BULLETIN

BELLEFONTE, Pa.—(U.P.)— A Penn State college citizens' committee today demanded that G-men be asked to aid in the search of a sex maniac blamed for the murder of two girls as state motor police followed up what was described as an important clue.

BELLEFONTE, Pa.—Police and CCC youths searched high and low in this central Pennsylvania section today for the tan sedan of a "maniac killer" wanted for the sex slayings of a comely girl factory worker and a Pennsylvania State college co-ed.

Lynn G. Adams, head of the state motor police, said the fatal bludgeoning of Fay Gates, 25-year-old employe of a match factory near here early yesterday was "identical" with the slaying of Rachel Taylor, 17-year-old co-ed, five weeks ago and only 12 miles away.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the same man killed both," he said.

Two girl companions of Miss Gates said a tan car had been following them a short time before

Nutter, an amateur boxer, is said to have passed several bad checks in Mt. Vernon and Fredericktown and one in Bellville Friday as he hitch-hiked his way to Mansfield.

He eluded police and deputy sheriffs who waited for him Friday afternoon at the Mansfield corporation limits.

Authorities said he obtained from $12 to $15 on a bad check at the Hursh drug store in Bellville.

POLICE GUARD GILEAD PLANT

Stand At Gates As Day Shift Men Go To Work.

MT. GILEAD — Twelve special policemen stood guard at the Hydraulic Press Manufacturing company plant here this morning as the day shift—only one now working—entered the plant.

The men were deputized by Major James Bennett, who said he had heard that there might be an attempt by night shift workers, who were laid of last week, to keep other workers from entering the plant.

No such incident occurred, however. Howard McMillin, president of the company, said he had not asked for the protection. None of the special officers was armed, and all left shortly after the starting whistle sounded.

CITY CLEAN-UP ACTION STARTS

Crews at Work in First Ward Today; Fire Prevention Campaign on, Too.

Mansfield's spring clean-up and fire prevention campaign swung into high gear today as a crew of city workmen and four trucks moved into the First ward for the collection of the winter's accumulation of rubbish.

The annual drive sponsored jointly by the Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Association of Commerce with the city cooperating, is being conducted to make Mansfield "Ohio's cleanest city."

The clean-up campaign calls for the collection of rubbish on designated days in all of the city's six wards. The rubbish must be placed in containers at the curb before 7 a. m. on the day designated for collection.

At noon Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said that approximately 20 tons of rubbish had been hauled away from the curbs and at the present pace the entire ward would be covered before evening.

He warned against placing ashes at the curb for collection, pointing out that the city maintains such a service free of charge for customers of the garbage service.

The clean-up crew will continue tomorrow swinging into the Second Ward. On Wednesday they will move to the Third Ward and on Thursday tackle the Fourth.

The welcome balmy weather came unexpectedly after the temperature dropped to 28 degrees, four below freezing, Sunday and left frost in the lowlands.

The weatherman forecasts partly cloudy skies and cooler tonight and Tuesday. It will not get very chilly, however, because the weather is warm throughout the entire west, the forecast said.

Roosevelt Pledges Support To Protect Non-Combatants.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON— President Roosevelt, who has asked warring European nations to refrain from bombing non-combatants, pledged his support today for any international agreement endorsing that principle.

"The bombing of helpless and unprotected civilians is a tragedy which has aroused the horror of all mankind," he wrote the annual convention of the American Red Cross.

"I recall with pride that the United States consistently has taken the lead in urging that this inhuman practice be prohibited."

Pointing out that the international Red Cross urged nations in 1938 to take joint steps "to prevent such outrages in the future," the president expressed regret that this never had been done.

"As for the United States government," he said, "I can assure you of my strongest recommendation for adherence to any international convention which will give this protection to civilian and non-combatant populations."

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, reported that 250,000 American women had made 2,000,000 garments and surgical dressings in response to demands from Poland, Hungary, Rumania, Lithuania, Latvia, France, England, Finland and Norway.

GETS PEN TERM ON ARSON PLEA

Farmer Sentenced to One to 10 Years After Admitting He Started Blazes.

John W. McGugin, 57, Monroe township farmer, was sentenced to one to 10 years in the Ohio penitentiary today after he pleaded guilty to an indictment for arson before Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston.

Arrested about two weeks ago on evidence obtained by Gayle Owens, deputy state fire marshal, McGugin admitted setting fire to four barns in the past 11 years to collect about $13,000 in insurance. McGugin submitted his plea through Atty. R. E. Hutchison.

Last of the four barns was destroyed by fire last January. McGugin collected $4,216 for the structure, on his farm near Lucas. The other barns were on farms he owned in Knox county.

With the sentencing of McGugin today, Judge Huston disposed of the last of 14 cases in which grand jury indictments were returned without any of them going to a jury for trial.

Six of the 14 pleaded innocent to indictments when they were arraigned before Judge Huston several days ago, but they

DIES IN FLAMES

Baby Killed in Cleveland Apartment House Fire.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Two-year-old Wilma Echols was burned to death, her month-old baby brother overcome by smoke and her parents burned today when fire swept their living quarters in an east side apartment dwelling.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Echols, tried to save both children from the flames which broke out at 3 a. m.

Both father and mother plunged to the ground when Mrs. Echols, faint from burns on her hands, face and shoulders, collapsed when she was about to pass Edgar jr., the baby, out of the window. The baby was dropped back in the blazing room and Echols then climbed a tree and over the sill to rescue his son.

He was driven back by flames when he attempted to re-enter the room. He suffered burns on hands and arms.

Wilma was dead when firemen finally succeeded in entering the bedroom where she slept.

Massed Troops On Frontiers Spread Alarm

Germany and Russia Increase Forces Along Southern Borders; Report Allied Fleet Plans to Land Army at Salonika.

BULLETIN

SOFIA, Bulgaria—(INS)—Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British ambassador to Turkey who now is in Soria, has formally requested King Boris to grant Allied and Turkish troops the right of passage through Bulgaria in event of war in the Balkans, German diplomatic circles said today.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(INS) — Jugoslavian anti-aircraft guns have shot down two Italian planes near the Albanian frontier, it was reported in a London Evening Standard Dispatch from Belgrade today.

(By Associated Press)

Events appeared moving swiftly toward a crisis in southeastern Europe today, overshadowing developments in the north where German airmen, blasting at the Allies' last foothold in Norway, reported they had bombed and damaged another British battleship off Narvik.

Balkan capitals were keyed to high nervous tension as the sound of marching men and the echo of military preparations on all sides convinced them that Europe's great warring powers were gradually coming to grips on a new front.

Turkey, bound to the Allies by mutual assistance pacts, was reported massing troops along her frontier facing Greece and Bulgaria.

Germany concentrated men and munitions near the Yugoslav and Hungarian frontiers, Russia bolstered to more than six divisions her troops facing Hungary on the north; Italy strengthened her forces along the Yugoslav border and in the Dodecanese islands.

Units of the British and French battle fleets, strongly based at Alexandria, appeared in the Aegean sea and there were vague rumors — apparently of German origin—that the Allies were planning to land troops in Salonika, Greece.

The reports coincided with the opening of a new railway running north from Salonika to the Bulgarian frontier, giving that Aegean port a new strategic significance.

Dickering.

There were strong indications that both Germany and Britain were dickering for Bulgarian support in event of the outbreak of war in the southeast.

Britain was understood to have promised Bulgaria a large loan and a corridor to the Aegean, with the agreement of Greece in order to insure a land passage for troops to Rumania.

Budapest was stirred by announcement of the discovery of a huge spy and propaganda organization and the arrest of 200 undercover agents said to have been

ADVANCE: Nazi Troops March Northward Toward Narvik Area

(By United Press)

BERLIN — Well informed sources asserted today that German forces were marching northward from the Trondheim area and were already half way to Narvik.

This would mean that the Germans had advanced nearly 200 miles northward from Trondheim and had reached the neighborhood of Mosjoen, proceeding along the coastal haighway. Beyond Mosjoen, the roads get bad.

The high command said that another "enemy" battleship had been hit by a heavy German aerial bomb off Narvik.

It said that German planes, aiding besieged German forces at Narvik, had attacked Allied troop concentrations and exploded a munitions dump.

Earlier, the official radio had claimed that a British battleship was damaged by a bomb off Narvik but both the high command and the official news agency called it an "enemy" battleship, which might refer either to a British or French ship.

The high command communique said German troops had begun a march northward from Grong, 20 miles east of Namsos.

"In central and southern Norway, pacification action is generally completed," the communique said. "The fortress at Hegra (in the mountains near Trondheim, where a Norwegian force had held out under constant bombardment

RETAKEN: Roeros Captured By Germans Without Loss of Life

Editor's Note: The following dispatch giving an eye-witness account of the German recapture of Roeros was telephoned to Stockholm from Roeros as German troops were mounting machine guns in the streets. Francis McEachen, United Press staff correspondent who telephoned the story, said that he was going to try to escape to the frontier even though German soldiers already were in the building from which he telephoned. He hasn't been heard from since.

ROEROS, Norway—(Delayed)—German soldiers re-took Roeros today (Sunday) with only one casualty—a man who fell from his motorcycle and broke his leg. Norwegian troops had evacuated the town in advance. Preparing for their re-entrance, the Germans dropped seven bombs in the center of town this morning as townspeople were going to church.

The 2,900 people left in Roeros were panic stricken by the bombing. Several were thrown to the ground but I have been unable to learn whether there were casualties.

Three bombs exploded a few yards from my hotel room, showering glass, fixtures and furniture all about me.

The town's horror at the attack was intensified because there was not a single soldier left in it. The authorities had attempted to save the town from such a raid by preserving its civilian status.

Wooden houses along the main street were shattered, windows

Disregarded Mother, Sorry Now

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another year has swung around and again Mother's day is with us. With so many of us, alas, when the flowers, candy, gloves, and other little trifles the shops put out for the second Sunday in May are sent to mother, we feel our duty is done for another year.

But there are thousands as loving as they are thoughtless—yes, I mean just that. The idea that they'll get around to doing something really nice for mother they keep in the back of their minds, month after month, year after year. It comes as a cruel shock when mother is no longer with them, to be cheered by the little thought or letter which would have meant so much to her in life. The following is typical of so many letters which have come to this column in the first days of loss over a beloved parent:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"If mother had only been of the dependent type, her children would feel more resigned to her sudden passing, which has left us not only bewildered but with a feeling of guilt as well. Mother was such a good sport that none of us ever thought of her as dependent on us for affection or little attentions. It was the other way 'round. We depended on her.

"Our father died when we were small children, Mother managed to secure a job as postmistress in our town, and she kept a little shop as well. Through changing administrations she continued to hold the job as postmistress, because she was popular with everyone and gave complete satisfaction.

"When age made her give up the postoffice job she was financially independent of us all. Her little home was cleared of incumbrance, and she continued with the little shop. We were all so proud of her. No whining over old age or infirmity. She was so capable that we forgot, I'm afraid, that she starved for the little attentions her children and grandchildren could have given so easily.

"After her death we found her diary. On days when any of us wrote, or even sent a postcard, the entry began: 'Red Letter Day. Sonny has sent me a card.' 'Happy for a week over Julia's letter. They may come to see me next summer—wouldn't that be to heavenly?'

"Well, we didn't get 'round to go visiting her very often, though we loved her devotedly. But we had our own husbands and children to look after, and I expect we forgot when we should have remembered. Now she is gone and it's too late. We used to be mildly amused over Mother's day we thought it sentimental, and never sent the litle gifts that would have made her so happy.

"I'm writing this, Miss Fairfax, in the hope that other sons and daughters, who like us, love their mothers devotedly, may remember Mother while she is here to be remembered.

"REGRETFUL."

Raisins Add Nourishment

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

Raisins in breads, cookies and cakes go down on the list of nourishing dishes. The recipes given here today have all been specially tested and, if made according to directions, should prove mighty good.

South Seas Raisin Bread is made with one and one-half cups seedless raisins, one cup each milk and water, one tablespoon salt, four tablespoons granulated sugar, four tablespoons fat, two teaspoons cinnamon, two compressed yeast cakes and seven cups sifted all-purpose flour (approximate), also melted fat for brushing top. Pour boiling water over raisins and let stand for five minutes. Drain and cool. Combine milk, water, salt, sugar, fat and spice, and heat lukewarm. Add crumbled yeast and stir to dissolve. Add half the flour and beat. Add raisins and blend. Add remainder of flour and mix. Lift to board and knead until smooth and elastic, about five minutes. Return to pan and brush top with melted fat. Cover and let stand in warm place away from air until double in bulk, about one and one-half hours. Divide in two equal portions and form into two loaves. Place in greased bread pans, cover and let rise in warm place away from air until double in size, about 45 to 60 minutes. Bake in 350 degrees Fahrenheit oven about 55 minutes. Remove from pans and brush sides and tops with melted butter.

Delicious Cake.

Raisin Apple Cake, spicy and altogether delicious, is made with one and one-half cups seedless raisins, three-fourths cup candied cherries, one and one-half cups thick, sweetened, hot apple sauce, one cup chopped walnut meats, two cups granulated sugar, one cup fat, four eggs, three and one-half cups sifted all-purpose flour, one and one-half teaspons salt, two teaspoons soda, one teaspoon allspice, two teaspoons cinnamon, teaspoon each nutmeg and cloves, and one tablespoon grated fresh orange rind. Rinse raisins, drain, and dry on towel. Rinse cherries, drain, dry on towel, and cut into quarters. Drain off all surplus liquid from applesauce before measuring. Cream sugar and fat thoroughly. Add well-beaten eggs, and mix. Add flour sifted with salt, soda and spices, and mix thoroughly. Add raisins, cherries, nuts, hot applesauce and orange rind, beating well. Pour into paperlined round pan or spring mold, about nine inches across and three inches deep. Bake in 325 degrees Fahrenheit oven about two and one-fourth hours. Test with toothpick or cake tester before removing from oven.

Raisin Spice Cake Ice Cream is the thing to serve when someone says that there's nothing new in the way of ice cream any more. For about one and one-half quarts use one cup seedless raisins, two cups scalded milk, two tablespoons cornstarch, one cup brown sugar, one-fourth cup white sugar, teaspoon nutmeg, one-eighth teaspoon cloves, teaspoon cinnamon, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one egg, teaspoon vanilla extract and one cup cream. Boil raisins five minutes in sufficient water to cover; drain and cool. Combine cornstarch, sugars, spices and salt, and moisten with a little cold milk. Add beaten egg, blend, and add to scalded milk; cook until thick, stirring constantly. When cool, add flavoring and cream. Pour into ice cream freezer and freeze to a mush; add raisins and finish freezing.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"I wish I knew the answer to that," I said slowly. "Mary puzzles me. When I saw her just now, she seemed as carefree as a—"

"Try 'bird' dear," Lillian said, wrinkling her nose at me, and I knew she was trying to lessen the tension of my own nerves. "It's always a good simile. But let it ride. We'll accept the fact that she appeared carefree. But I gather that you weren't quite sure whether the insouciance was real or a clever—and desperate—pose."

"You are clairvoyant," I told her, not for the first time in our long association. "That is exactly what I thought about her."

"Well!" Lillian said slowly, "if she puzzles you, who knows her every mood and tense—have known them from her early childhood—she'll probably be able to click with everybody else. Nobody else, least of all Philip Veritzen, is going to suspect she's jittery, unless she cracks under the strain."

"I don't believe she's going to do that during the rehearsal," I said after another silence. "She's keyed up to that effort, and I believe she's going through with it like the trouper she is. But afterwards, especially if her father-in-law takes that part away from her, I fear what her reaction may be."

"Don't worry your precious pate any longer over that possibility," Lillian said grimly. "I'm going to draw cards and sit in this game myself. And if Phil Veritzen tries any skulduggery, I'm going to hand him the nicest little dish of artistic blackmail he has ever looked at in his whole life."

I looked at her astounded. "What—what do you mean?" I asked.

She laughed reassuringly.

"Don't get frightened, old dear!" she said soothingly. "I'm not going to do or say anything that is actionable, or that might land me in the hoose-gow. But I've known Phil Veritzen a long time, and there are several episodes in his life which could easily be subjects for much mirth, and I think Phil would rather be hanged, drawn and quartered than to know that people were secretly laughing at him—nobody would ever dare to do it openly. So, if I see signs of his getting rambunctious, I'm going to say sweetly:

" 'Do you know, Phil, old dear, this reminds me so strongly of that time in—when you were rehearsing—. And I must remember to tell dear Olga about that—she will be so-o amused.' Then I'll start in on the reminiscences, watching Phil the while as no old cat ever eyed a squirming mouse.

"It ought not to take long," she went on. "Phil's awfully quick on the uptake. There'll be no nonsense about Mary's having the role when I get the heat turned on him properly."

"But," I said, when I had stopped laughing at her ludicrous mimicry of herself, "remember Mary's exceedingly 'quick on the uptake,' too. And I don't believe she'd want the role if she thought her father-in-law really didn't think her qualified for it."

"You haven't grasped me, yet," Lillian said patiently. "This is for use only if something happens that will prevent Mary from giving that rendition in which you have drilled her. Once old Phil hears that, she's safe in the role. His artistic conscience won't permit him to do anything else except nail her down to a contract. But it's a good weapon in reserve, isn't it?"

"It surely is," I told her heartily, and was indeed comforted by her promise.

Circulation Should Be Pepped Up

By MME. QUI VIVE

Beauticians are stressing circulation, as they are stressing other health measures, to help along the campaign for pulchritude. When the beautiful Marguerite or Eleanor gives you a facial she is likely to orate at considerable length, tell you why your complexion is up for repairs and what you should do about it.

She knows and so should you, that the free circulation of the blood has much to do with the vitality of the hair, the delicate coloring of the complexion, the rosy glow of the flesh beneath the fingernails, the well being of the teeth, the brightness of the eyes.

The circulatory system is marvelously organized. It supplies nourishment to all the tissues of the body every half minute—every thirty-second heart beat to be exact—and at the same time it picks up debris to be disposed of. It is at once a distributor of life-giving food and a collector of waste material.

When the skin surface is chilled, fingernails and lips blue, the circulatory system is on strike. Sluggish blood streams are the cause of many beauty ills.

The capillaries, which give color to the cheeks, are so tiny that their walls are transparent and permit the passage of a single corpuscle at a time. Unless the body is exercised, blood flowing normally, these tiny veins are sluggish and the skin is pale. The lips also change in color, acquiring a wan pink or a blue-pink cast that does not make for beauty.

Many a case of sagging tissues and enlarged pores is due to sleepy blood vessels. Hence the need of fresh air and exercise which give resilience to the muscles, tone the tiny fibres that rest below the surface of the skin.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, May 7.

PROGRESS, prosperity and generally propitious circumstances may be looked for on this day, judging by the lunar and mutual aspects. It is a time for promoting projects of a novel, revolutionary and unhackneyed character, which will attract the attention of superiors, especially in large corporations, or where the influence of political, diplomatic or secret organizations is desired. Strategy or intrigue may be factors in connection with group action. Professional advancement in many directions is under excellent auspices, as are social aims.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great promise, with progress and advancement in many new directions. "The Authority on Authorities"

YOUR SECOND LEAD

When you lead against a suit contract card which wins the trick, and you then repeat the suit, it is usually important that you select the right card. The correct one can be highly informative to your pardner, in giving him information about the rest of your suit, and sometimes about other parts of your hand. Choice of an incorrect card may misguide him and wrech the entire defensive work of your side.

If you lead high against a 4-Heart contract and win the first trick, your second lead is extremely important from any of the following spade holdings:

1. ♠ A K 8 6 5 2. ♠ A K Q 6 5
3. ♠ A K 4. ♠ A 3
5. ♠ A 6 3 6. ♠ A 6 4 3
7. ♠ A 9 8 5 4 3 2 8. ♠ K Q J 4

With either No. 1 or No. 2, your first lead should be the K, as it is conventional that opening an ace against a suit contract denies possession of the king. The second lead, if you repeat the suit, should be the A in the first case and the Q in the second. If the sequence in the second hand had extended as low as the J, that would have been the lead. Presenting the bottom of the sequence on the second lead lets your partner know what all your honors are in the suit.

With No. 3 you lead the A and follow with the K, reversing the usual order, to show you are now blank in that suit and ready to ruff it. With No. 4 you lead the A and then the 3. If your partner can read the second card as your lowest, he may know you hold no more. So with No. 5, after the A you should lead not the 3, but the 6, and with No. 6, after the A you should lead the 6 to let him know you have one, possibly two, more.

With No. 7, your A lead is in the hope of catching him with a singleton, able to ruff the next lead. If he does that, he will want to get you in the lead again, so you can give him another ruff. Therefore, with your second lead tell him where your best chance for a re-entry is—by leading the high 9 if it is in the higher-ranking diamonds and the lower-ranking 2 if it is in the lower ranking clubs.

With No. 8, follow the same principle as in No. 2. If your K wins the first trick, lead the J to the second trick to let your partner know all your honors, or else the 4 to his probable A if you think you can't spare one of your honors because of what you see in the dummy.

Witness Calls Maritime Union Leaders Communists

DECLARES HE TRANSMITTED REDS' ORDERS

Bridges and Others Named in Charges Heard by Dies Committee.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Principal leaders of maritime unions on both the east and west coasts were charged with taking orders from the Communist party today by a man who said he personally transmitted these orders.

Peter J. Innis, Bridgeport, Conn., seaman, told the Dies committee he was sent to the west coast by the Communists in 1936 to help prepare for the water front strike in San Francisco.

He named as Communists, Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader, Joseph Curran, head of the CIO maritime union, Mervin Rathbourne, president of the American Communications Association, and Tommy Ray, who he identified as "head of the maritime faction of the Communist party."

"How do you know they are Communists?" Rep. Voorhis (D) Calif., asked.

"I attended faction meetings with them and they took orders from the Communists," he said. "I know they took these orders because I transmitted them."

Innis said he gave Bridges a message from Ray "ordering him to attend a Communist meeting in Madison Square Garden, in New York on December 14, 1936."

Bridges did not want to go—but after receiving those orders, he went," Innis said.

Questioned further, he said he attended faction meetings in San Francisco, Portland, Ore., San Pedro, Calif., and New York at which one or all of the men he named were present.

Innis, a small blond-haired man, said he joined the national maritime union at the time of its inception in January, 1936, following dissolution of the international seamen's union.

He said he participated as a chief picket dispatcher in the New Work water-front strike that year and that after that he was sent to the west coast to prepare for a strike there. The witness said his trip to San Francisco was arranged by Curran and Ray.

"They sent me to the S. S. President Taft to look up a chief engineer's yoeman named Al Yates," Innis declared. "He took me to the engineer and said I was his relief. I took his job.

"Yates was a well-known Communist who had been thrown in jail several times. When we got to San Francisco, he was on the dock waiting to get his job back."

YULE SEAL SALE SET AT $4,652

Clinics, Educational Work Are Assured Says Mrs. Rehder, Making Report.

The anti-tuberculosis clinic and educational program of the Richland County Tuberculosis association were again assured today with announcement of the return of $4,652.43 from sale of Christmas seals in the county, by Mrs. R. C. Rehder, chairman of the sales committee.

The amount received is only $347.57 short of the goal of $5,000 set for the annual sale which got under way early last December.

Seals were mailed to over 10,000 persons in the county, according to Mrs. Rehder, and of this number 500 failed to send their contributions to the association. These persons are urged to mail their contributions as soon as possible.

Of the amount already received, $4,339.42 was returned by mail and $313.01 was contributed through seal sale in post offices, hotels and other public buildings, Mrs. Rehder pointed out. Mansfield's contribution to the sale amounts to $3,315.15. Dr. F. J. Heringhaus, association president, said today he is planning to go ahead with the contemplated program of 15 diagnostic and re-check clinics during the year, the educational program in the schools, and the skin testing program of discovering tuberculosis among school children.

Arraigned in municipal court, charged with driving onto route 13 from Possum run road without observing a stop were James Lawhorn, 19, R. D. 2, Bellville; Calvin Byers, 54, R. D. 1, Bellville; Wilbur Sheriff, 34, R. D. 4, Mansfield; Jacob Bernhardt, 20, of 62 High street. All pleaded guilty and were fined $5 and costs.

State patrolmen testified that Stahl figured in an accident on U. S. route 42, north of Mansfield about 1 a. m. Sunday in which his car collided with a machine driven by Louis A. Barnes, 26½ South Park street.

They said Stahl fled from the scene abandoning his car, but gave himself up at the sub-station yesterday afternoon.

ADMIRAL SAYS MUCH DEPENDS ON AIR POWER

Declares Italian Entrance In War Can Hinge on Truth of Nazi Bombing Claims.

By REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING JR.
(U. S. Navy, Retired)
(Copyright, 1940, By United Press)

Naval warfare during the past week again has brought to the fore the question of airplanes versus surface ships.

Germany asserts her bombing planes have sunk a battleship.

Britain denies it.

Upon the truth a great deal may hinge: The eventual entrance of Italy into the war and the attitude of other "non-belligerent" and neutral states, for example.

Assuming the German claim is true, students argued over the week-end that the day of the great battleship is ended.

So far, I see no positive proof that this contention is true.

What is true is that the war is bringing new methods of attack which will require new methods of defense.

The last war brought the submarine menace but a method of defense was found. This war has brought the air attack and it seems entirely possible that methods of defense also will be found.

German planes may or may not have sunk a British battleship but they have by no means sunk the British navy.

If an airplane bomb actually has destroyed as modern a battleship as one of the Queen Elizabeth class—completed in 1915 and contemporaries of our battleships Pennsylvania and Arizona—then, something serious may happen to the world's belief in what constitutes strength on the seas.

The loss of faith in the great battleship, however, will be the result not so much because of reality as because of a "state of mind."

We have known since the World war that a salvo of high explosive shells can penetrate armor and detonate within a ship. But, that an airplane bomb could penetrate a heavily armored deck, reach and explode in a battleship's magazine, has been believed something too improbable to consider seriously.

How such a thing could happen to a battleship from even the largest bomb, exploding on an armored deck nearly six inches thick and from which, it is supposed, the force would be mostly upwards, is a mystery.

If the Germans do destroy a battleship with an air bomb, the causes will be:

Inadequate airplane defense, inefficient anti-aircraft gun fire, insufficient thickness of armored deck, or ineffective protection of magazines from heavy explosions under water.

The battleship, although the victim, would not relinquish its primary to the bombing plane, however, for the victory, probably would be only a temporary one.

CLUB MANAGER GOLF VETERAN

Alves Loses No Time Setting Plans for Galion Country Club Links Season.

GALION — Grange Alves, jr, new pro-manager of Galion Country club, last year was assistant to Capt. Charles C. Clarke at Willowick club, Cleveland.

Alves, 29, was born at French Lick Springs, Indiana, when his father was professional at the hotel course there. At the early age of 18 months he was swinging a golf club.

He began active golfing as a caddy at the age of 11, and two years later went into the pro shop. In 1930 he was runner-up in the junior amateur championship in Cleveland.

After turning pro in 1933 he served two years as assistant to his father at Acacia Country club in Cleveland, and in 1935 went on a driving range as instructor for four years.

Alves has lost no time in outlining plans for the coming season for the Galion club, although golf has been hampered by bad weather.

Since March 15 the club has taken in 60 new members under a plan of separate golf and social memberships. The first dance is scheduled May 26.

COUNTY'S QUEST FOR T. B. HOME SNAGGED AGAIN

Owner of Thomas Sanitarium Declines to Sign Over Property as Rental.

The county's attempt to acquire the Eleanor Thomas sanitarium for a T. B. rest home apparently hit another snag today when T. Amos Jones, the owner and operator, declined to sign an agreement with the county commissioners which would give them the sanitarium on a monthly rental basis.

Atty. R. J. Nichols, representing Jones, said the owner of the sanitarium had "changed his mind because there has been too much bickering and delay about the contract."

C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of commissioners, said he had not talked to Jones but understood he wanted more money than the $69 a month per patient that was agreed on verbally several weeks ago. Mitchell said Jones proposed that figure and the county was willing to accept it.

Mitchell said the commissioners had delayed signing the agreement because they first wanted the state health department to approve the sanitarium as a T. B. home. He said they have waited three weeks for a reply from the state department.

Commissioners hoped to rent the Thomas sanitarium to provide facilities for a part of the county's T. B. patients until funds are available to build a county rest home, Mitchell said.

A half-mill levy for a T. B. program, collected for the first time this year, will give the county $45,000 a year for five years, but Mitchell said most of this year's funds will be needed to pay back bills for keeping the county's patients in state rest homes.

HOW YOU CAN GET A
$100 LOAN
IF YOU CAN PAY BACK $4.46 A MONTH

No endorsers or guarantors needed—No credit questions asked of friends or relatives—Quick, friendly service.

Do you want to get a loan quickly and simply? At Household Finance you can borrow $20 to $500 without endorsers or guarantors, if you can make regular monthly payments. From the table below you may choose the payment plan which fits your own purse. You may repay a small amount each month. Or you may make larger payments in order to pay up sooner.

Choose your own payment plan

Suppose that you need a $100 loan. You find this amount in the first column of the table. Then read across picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will find, for instance, that monthly payments of $9.46 each will repay a $100 loan in full in twelve months. Or, if you wish smaller payments, as little as $4.46 a month for thirty months will also repay a $100 loan.

When you borrow at Household Finance, you pay charges only for the actual time you have the money. The sooner you repay, the less your loan costs. Four monthly installments of $26.26 each, or a total of only $105.04, for instance, will repay a $100 loan in full. (All payments shown in the table include the charges. You pay nothing more.)

One rate to everyone

Household charges only one rate—the same to everyone, whether new customer or former borrower.

All you do to borrow

All you do to get a Household Finance loan is to acquaint us with your problem. We require no salary or wage assignment, no stocks or bonds. (Loans are made on furniture, car or note.) No questions regarding your credit are asked of friends or relatives—and you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get the money you need in a simple, private transaction.

Fair Treatment

Household shows every consideration to the borrower faced with sickness or unemployment while paying on a loan. Last year Household foreclosed on only one chattel mortgage for each 10,000 loans—an action taken then only as protection against fraud.

Find the loan you need in the first column of the table and read across. See how you can repay your loan with a small part of your pay check. Then phone or visit us. You will be under no obligation to borrow.

Leaders In Congress Predict June 1 Adjournment

BARKLEY SAYS LARGEST PART OF WORK DONE

Agenda Sliced to Relief and Other Appropriations; Labor Bills Stopped.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders trimmed the legislative agenda for the remainder of this session to relief and other appropriation bills today, and predicted adjournment the first week in June.

"We have accomplished most of our work," said Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley, "There is no reason why we can't get away from Washington around June 1."

House decision to send wage-hour law amendments back to committee, indications that the senate would refuse to become involved in a controversy over Wagner labor relations act changes and the apparent willingness of supporters of anti-lynching legislation not to press for action on their bill at this late date presented an optimistic picture for administration chieftains.

Chief controversies for the early part of the week are in the senate, where a vote is likely today on a bill by Senator John G. Townsend, R., Del., to repeal the foreign silver purchase act. An amendment by Sen. Key Pittman (D., Nev.) to require foreign nations to spend proceeds from their silver sales to this country for American agriculture products has made passage of the bill what Barkley described as a "nip-and-tuck proposition."

At the same time, the senate judiciary committee meets to consider the house approved Logan-Walter bill, one of the controversial pieces of legislation left over from last year, which would subject administrative rulings to judicial review.

Committee Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, (D., Ariz.) said he believed congress ought to remain in session until it had disposed of the bill. Administration leaders are opposed to it.

Another senate controversy may develop after the special reorganization committee considers a resolution by Sen. Pat McCarran (D., NEV.) to kill the president's latest reorganization plan which would put the civil aeronautics authority under the department of commerce. The reorganization plan becomes effective unless both the senate and house adopt resolutions disapproving it within 60 days of the date of its submission to congress (April 11).

Meanwhile, House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin branded the reorganization plans as "rash," and charged that it would retard the national defense program and set back the entire aviation industry "at least five years."

Major emphasis in the house this week will be on the Hatch "clean state politics" bill which the judiciary committee pigeonholed last week. But on Wednesday the house will consider the billion dollar agriculture departments appropriation bill.

Willard Resident Ends Her Life in Railroad Reservoir

WILLARD — The body of Miss Lucy Newman, 56, was found at 6:30 this morning floating in the B. & O. railroad reservoir adjoining the Newman farm a mile-and-a-half west of Willard.

Coroner J. D. Bradish gave a verdict of suicide. He said the woman had been dead five or six hours.

Four years ago a brother, a teacher in a Cleveland high school, returned to the home farm after a nervous breakdown, and hanged himself.

When Miss Newman was missing this morning, members of the family searched the house and barn. Her brother, Phillip, mounted a horse and rode over the farm, finally discovering the body floating face down in three feet of water.

Other survivors are a brother, John, and sister, Rena, at home, and three other sisters, Mrs. William Miller of Willard, Mrs. Cora Conn of Hutchison, Kas., and Mrs. Netta Peterson of New Mexico.

MURDER VERDICT

Death of Night Club Hostess Declared Homicide.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Cuyahoga County Coroner Samuel R. Gerber today returned a verdict of asphyxiation by suffocation and homicide in the death early Friday of Justine Hartford, 35-year-old night club hostess.

Miss Hartford was found dead in a driveway a short distance from her east side rooming house about an hour after she left the night club with two waitresses and a male companion.

Candidates Face Final Week of Campaign

Up and Down THE STREET

A new office directory was posted today at the main and side entrances to the city building. It lists 47 different offices which the building houses — including private offices. Some city employes speculated that the directory had been put up not only because one had been needed for some time, but also because anyone looking for a city office usually found his way to the service director's door and made his inquiry in person. The directory is expected to cut down needless traffic in that direction.

Johnny Barrett, an outfielder, who played center field with the Mansfield Red Sox, champions of the Ohio State league in 1937, is doing all right for himself. The fleet-footed athlete took over Dom DiMaggio's place with the San Francisco Seals and appears to have won the berth. He is the lead-off man for the Pacific Coast league team.

The Y. M. C. A. is usually closed on Sundays, but yesterday there was nearly as much activity at the building as there is on any week day. Twelve members of the Buckeye Hobby club spent the afternoon and evening in the building preparing for the opening of their second annual Hobby show on Wednesday, and the Phalanx fraternity held a swimming party in the "Y" pool for members and friends. Both groups also served lunch in the dining room in the evening.

Spring has officially come to Mansfield now that the purple violets are blooming in the little valley between General hospital and the new Johnny Appleseed school, Deputy County Auditor Arthur S. Beck thinks. "That valley always shows spring first and it's still the prettiest in the city," Beck commented. For sentimental reasons it means more to him, because he and other Mansfield business and professional men went swimming in the creek that runs through it when they were boys.

THREE KILLED IN DICE GAME

Waiter Goes Beserk With Gun After Boss Refuses to Advance Salary.

MARTINS FERRY—(U.P.)—Murder charges were expected to be filed today against William Sevastis, 53-year-old waiter, who went beserk and killed three men and wounded two others because his boss would not advance him wages during a dice game.

Sevastis told police he lost his bankroll in the dice played in the restaurant yesterday. He then asked Mike Manos, his employer, for a salary advance. Manos refused.

Sevastis, according to the story given police, strode behind a counter, grabbed a gun and killed Manos. Then he fired at random. Of six men customers in the cafe, four were shot, two fatally.

The dead men were Gus Gramatkis and John Levanis. Tom Provezis was wounded seriously. The left hand of Dimetri Prattu was grazed by a bullet. Two customers escaped unscathed.

Sevastis left the cafe and climbed upstairs to living quarters where he shot once at John Jordans who was not injured.

Police found Sevastis seated in front of the restaurant holding the gun. He offered no resistance. County Prosecutor Ross Michener said he would be given a medical examination and sanity hearing.

FARLEY SPEECH AT CINCINNATI ADDS INTEREST

Stump Speaking Activities of Office Seekers Arrive at Intensified Stage.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Candidates for party nominations swung into the last full week of campaigning today before the primary election in Ohio on May 14.

Most candidates will intensify "stump speaking" activities in the closing days of the race in an effort to stir some semblance of interest in a campaign that has been unequalled for its dullness.

Party rallies — for the Democrats in Lima and for the G. O. P. in Columbus and Cleveland — closed last week's political activities and considerable interest centered on the appearance next Friday in Cincinnati of Postmaster James A. Farley who will deliver an address at a Democratic meeting.

Although six of the seven candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor spoke at the Democratic rally in Lima and promised a "united front" after the primary battle, reverberations in this contest continued throughout the state. Former Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy, Columbus, was the only candidate for governor who was unable to attend the Lima meeting.

In Cleveland, seat of the most populous county of the state and perhaps a decisive one in the voting next week the veteran Democratic leader, Burr Gongwer, deposed county chairman, urged his followers to support former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy for the gubernatorial nomination.

The recognized Democratic organization in Cuyahoga county led by Ray T. Miller was understood to be committed to the Davey candidacy.

The former governor comes to the state capital tonight for a rally at which 10 counties in central Ohio will be represented, according to his campaign headquarters.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Backstage on Broadway.

Highlights At "Higher and Higher."

It took an expensive, witty, and highly successful Rodgers and Hart musical comedy to prove to Broadway that when a seal is on the same stage with an actor, the actor hasn't got a chance. An actor saying a line or doing a dance or singing a song while a seal is onstage, or has just gone offstage, or is about to come onstage again, is just wasting his time. The players in the town's newest girl and tune divertissement began to realize this when they overheard people in the street saying: "Let's go to see 'Higher and Higher'—you know, the one with that seal in it?"

Jewelled sophisticates on their way to El Morocco after the performance drop backstage to congratulate the stars—Jack Haley, Marta Eggert and Shirley Ross.

And they are not in the stellar dressing rooms two minutes before they are looking over the actors' shoulders and stretching their necks and beginning, "Uh I say, they don't keep that seal anywhere around here, do they?"

More visitors come back to see the seal than anyone else.

"That seal" is two seals—Sharkey, the star, and Teddy, the understudy so passionately yearn Warner Brothers musical, did an understudy so passionately yearn to step into the star's role—and never, not even in a Warner Brothers musical, did the big moment arrive so promptly.

For Sharkey is as unpredictable as Simone Simon used to be in the old days on the Zanuck lot, and Teddy has several times been called in (sometimes in the middle of the performance, the audience never knew the difference) to substitute for the glamor boy, who was cutting up.

Now, I regret to report, a crisis has arisen backstage. Teddy is getting temperamental. The applause virus has spread through his seal's soul, and he and Sharkey have terrible fights because Teddy is jealous over the star's success; sore, because he doesn't get out on the stage more often.

He just stands in the wings every night, flipping his flippers and whisking his whiskers, waiting for the moment when Sharkey, dazzled with adulation, will miss a cue, and therefore a fish.

The human actors are having their problems, too. Joseph Scander, one of the boys in the cast, goes around analyzing handwriting and telling the girls exactly what he thinks of their characters. Cliff Ferri hates to look at a World's Fair poster because he is still carrying the torch for one of last year's aquabelles. Miriam Franklin, the pretty dancer, and Johnny Stearns, the actor-director of the Peterborough summer theatre, are very warm for May.

But the one who really suffers is Freddie Nay. He has a crush on Eleanor Eberle, and every time he has to bounce a "hatchet" off her head in the "Murder" scene, it just breaks his heart.

"Two for the Show" Talk.

Over at "Two for the Show" the difficulty is not animals, but audience. The eccentricities of the aisle-seaters has the cast in a dither. The other night a woman sitting in the first row got hysterical at Richard Haydn's stage lecture, and couldn't stap laughing.

Haydn gallantly interrupted himself to offer her his glass of water, but it was a wrong move. The lady's hysteria took a turn for the worse, and she had to get up and leave until Haydn got off the stage and it was safe for her to come back.

Then, a couple of performances later a gentleman in the first row (they've decided that's Danger Row) threatened the drummer in the pit with a penknife (a gold penknife, the victim said) because the musician ignored his demand for a match. The knife-brandisher, it was discovered, was full of between-the-act daiquiris.

The other night Dean Norton threw a surprise birthday party for his love, Eunice Healy, and afterward the cast went over to Sardi's to celebrate with Eve Arden, whose birthday is the same.

The stage door Johnny business is fine these midnights. Betty Hutton gets two orchids a night from her lawyer beau, regularly as clockwork. And Nadine Gae got such an ardent fan letter from a male admirer that she had her husband answer it.

Nancy Hamilton, who wrote the show, and Brenda Forbes, its comedienne, have taken a house at Sneeden's Landing. They took it, everyone believes, chiefly because it is called Red Barn, and one of the songs in the review is "The House with the Little Red Barn." Since becoming a country resident, Miss Forbes has discovered she's afraid of the wild life that runs all over the place. She got into her car the other day and found, sitting right behind the steering wheel with his eye on the ignition, a rabbit.

The "DuBarry Was a Lady" Dopesheet.

The chorus girls have a newly decorated dressing room which they launched the other night with all the champagne and fanfare of a Hollywood opening. The room which the beauties painted and refurnished themselves, is now called "Hag's End."

Ethel Merman is wearing a new bracelet full of emeralds and rubies. Betty Grable is flashing a gold ring heavy with rubies and diamonds Presents. And Betty is wearing her hair a little darker these days.

Florence Sundstrom gets through her chores in "Skylark" before the "DuBarry" curtain comes down, so she calls for her beau, Ronald Graham, almost every night.

The stagehands have been running a sort of Pot o' Gold for the whole company, with a $25 first prize.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"Irene." Screenplay by Alice Duer Miller from the musical comedy "Irene" by James H. Montgomery; music and lyrics by Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy. Directed by Herbert Wilcox. Principals: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Roland Young, Alan Marshal, May Robson, Billie Burke, Arthur Treacher, Marsha Hunt, Isabel Jewell, Doris Nolan.

* * * * *

Here's that spring tonic you'll be needing, especially if the "serious and significant" movies have had you hanging on the ropes. "Irene" is as light and ingratiating as its old tunes.

"Irene" was a popular stage musical of 20-odd years ago, distinctly in the old style of musical comedy. Producer-Director Wilcox has done a daring (and frequently delightful) thing in retaining that old-fashioned flavor for his new film. The picture resorts to few conventional movie ruses for "introducing" music or dancing. When it wants to sing it sings, ditto for its dancing.

The story has been somewhat altered in the transition, a fact which will disturb only those with phenomenal memories for items not worth remembering in the first place. It's still Cinderella, and still pleasant, a quaint colleen of a shopgirl becomes a mannequin, and through a preposterous error in identity becomes the toast of society. She marries the wealthy hero (Madame Lucy, whose salon's styles she exploits) after it seems she's destined to marry the other fellow whom she doesn't really love.

Miss Neagle heretofore seen in gifted characterizations of Queen Victoria and Nurse Edith Cavell, sparkles in a youthful role to which she brings beauty, vivacity, abundant charm, a pleasant singing voice and unusual dancing grace. Milland is the rich boy friend, Marshal, the rival. May Robson, the heroine's grandmother—all good. Billie Burke, given brighter lines than she has had lately, flutters beautifully, and Treacher, the perennial butler, has many top moments.

You'll notice an oddity in this movie subtitles. They're clever, and one of them saves the letdown after Neagle's "Alice Blue Gown" sequence in color is ended and the screen returns to black-and-white.

Most of the old tunes—"Irene" and "Castle of Dreams," along with "Alice Blue Gown"—are presented, and the last-named is given a "round-the-world tour" plus a burlesque revue featuring stout Martha Tilton, the movie's dark highlight.

Mansfield Hosts to Mud Hens at Fairground Tonight

Braves Seeking Third Straight League Victory

Farkas to Make Mound Debut Before "Moose Night" Crowd; Club Wins, 6-4, Sunday.

BY CHARLES MARTIN

RIDING the crest of a two-game winning streak, the Mansfield Braves return to Fairground park today to play hosts to the Tiffin Mud Hens under the floodlights at 8:15 p. m. in an Ohio State league contest.

Dick Farkas, righthander, hailing from Cleveland, makes his mound debut tonight before a "Moose night" crowd. The contest will mark the third straight time Manager Dewey Stover has depended on rookies to handle the pitching assignment.

Special lapel badges are being passed out today in the Moose lodge ranks for the contest. It is the first special night of the season, and Mansfield's second home appearance.

Stover had Frank Kress on the hill against the Mud Hens at Tiffin, and he breezed along in fine shape until the hosts pushed over three tallies in the sixth. Bob Arnold, veteran moundsman, took over the duties at this point and held Tiffin to four hits as the Braves came through with a 6 to 4 triumph.

Mansfield was trailing, 3 to 1, going into the seventh, but sent two runs across to knot the score, then took the lead in the next stanza, and tallied twice in the ninth to cinch the decision.

* * *

The victory enabled the Mansfield club to retain a share of the lead with Fremont and Findlay. The Oilers scored their second win by beating Fostoria, 1 to 8, yesterday.

Tiffin outhit the Braves, 10 to 9, but when the chips were down the Mansfielders were not to be denied.

Kress ran into trouble in the sixth when Miazga, Tiffin first baseman, clouted a home run with two mates on base.

Connie Zerman and Dick Morse, the latter a rookie handling Frank Ankenbrandt's hot corner berth, each secured a double and single to pace the Braves at the plate. Morse, although he had the only bobble, turned in a fine performance and strengthened Stover's belief that he may make it tough for Ankenbrandt, a member of last year's team.

Fans may get their first look at Carl Foldenauer, star catcher, in tonight's setto. While Tim Mangan has been taking care of the backstop duties in good fashion, Stover wants to use the lad for utility duty.

A highlight of yesterday's tilt at Tiffin was the defensive play of Stover. Twice he pegged perfect throws to home plate to cut off potential runs.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(U.P.)—Don't let the Louisville date line on this story surprise you. And don't be surprised if the next twenty stories I write come from here.

Did you ever hear of a horse named Bimelech? I did. I learned about him from my own stories, and being a great admirer of Henry McLemore's newspaper stuff, believed every word I read.

* * *

If you are sore at McLemore telling you that Bimelech was unbeatable in the Kentucky Derby, how do you think I feel about him. The rascal was so convincing to me that I can't get out of Louisville. He cost me every cent I have on earth, and just as soon as I finish this I am going to send the following letter to the United Press associations in New York:

"Dear Sirs:

"How on earth did you ever hire a horse race writer named McLemore? He couldn't distinguish between a Shetland pony and a Rhode Island red rooster. For one full week he touted, sang, shouted, and howled the praises of a horse named Bimelech. He said he could run in front, come from behind, go a distance, carry a freight car on his back, and was a mortal cinch to win the derby. Nuts!

(Signed) Disgusted Reader."

That's how I feel about the guy. He saw Gallahadion run on the coast and he knew what the horse could do. But I'll take an oath that not once during the daze leading up to the derby did he even mention Gallahadion, except to make slighting remarks about his ability.

As I said before I can't get out of Louisville.

I haven't any money. Before the field went to the post in the derby I robbed my money belt, shook the last copper out of my pig bank, and borrowed some money to bet on McLemore's unbeatable Bimelech.

Most of the other newspaper men have left Louisville. But not I. I haven't been able to find a railroad that takes an I. O. U., or an airplane company that will let you work out your passage, or a bus line that welcomes deadheads.

This is being written on the side of a highway that leads from Louisville to Cincinnati, and if it reads a bit jerkily that is because I have to lift my head every moment or two to try to thumb a ride.

* * *

Lots of autoists stop but, once they hear my name, step on the gas and try to run over me.

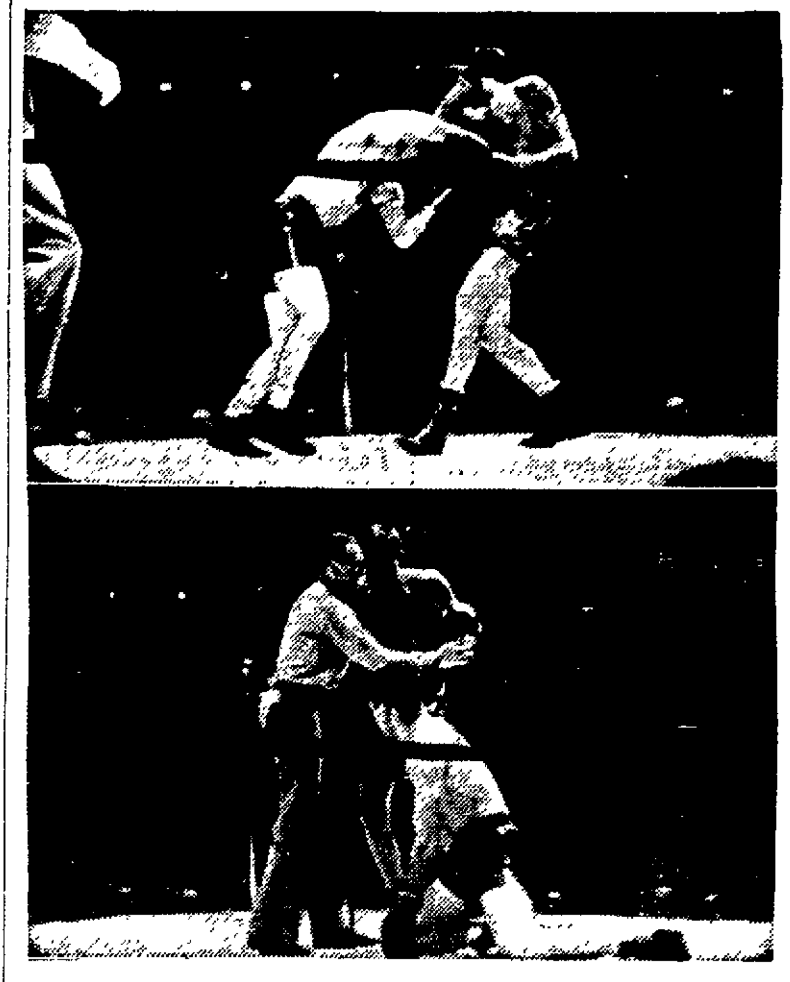
How Baer Beat Nate Mann



These two action shots show how Buddy Baer, brother of one-time Heavyweight Champion Max Baer, defeated Nathan Mann in the seventh round of their fight in New York. Badly outpointed up to that time, Baer raced out of his corner at the beginning of the seventh, round, smashed Mann to the floor. Top view shows Baer landing the knockout punch. Lower photo shows Mann on the floor.

Break up Those Yankees, DiMaggio's Absence Does It

By JUDSON BAILEY

BREAK up the Yankees! There was a time when that chant was as familiar as "take me out to the ball game" and the folks wondered how many players the world champions could give up without being weakened.

A popular pastime was speculating as to whether Bill Dickey or Joe DiMaggio or someone else was the key performer in the New York club's cast.

Young Giuseppe will have to be regarded — in Absentia — as the player most vital to the Yankees.

They were beaten again yesterday by the Detroit Tigers 6-4 in the kind of a game they seldom if ever would have lost last year.

Three times New York loaded the bases and only on one of these occasions did they score. The Yanks have left 69 men on the bases in their last nine games.

Imagine that from the slugging Yanks who used to break up games with their big innings. They haven't a single batter near the .300 mark and Frankie Crosetti got his first hit yesterday in 17 times at bat.

The plight of the champions might be worse if there was any one strong team in the American league capable of taking full advantage of their misfortune. But the Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians are battling each other to a standoff.

Bob Feller came up with one of his better pitching shows yesterday to beat the Sox 6-1. Ken Keltner gave noble aid, including a three-run homer, a single and a double. This boosted the Tribe back into the league lead.

The Chicago White Sox just managed to edge out the Philadelphia Athletics 6-5 and the St. Louis Browns came from behind in the late innings to top the Washington Senators 7-3 on the nine-hit hurling of Vernon Kennedy.

The Brooklyn Dodgers took up where they left off before the rains came by trimming the St. Louis Cardinals 9-6 in a wild game in which 39 players, a record breaking total, took part.

Two errors, one by First Baseman Norman Young and the other by Catcher Harry Danning of the Giants helped the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 decision over New York and Bucky Walters to his fourth victory without defeat.

* * *

The hillies put down a four-run ninth inning uprising by the Chicago Cubs to win 7-5 and the Boston Bees finally scored another triumph—their third—by a 5-1 margin over the faltering Pittsburgh Pirates.

Score Second Straight Win

McKinley Allows Four Hits In Softball Triumph.

With Dale McKinley hurling four-hit ball, the Alta Lumber company softball club registered its second straight win of the season by turning back the Tavernettes, 3 to 2, at Liberty park yesterday.

The Tavernettes gave the unbeaten club a battle all the way, but couldn't overcome the advantage piled up by the winners in the first two frames.

After tieing the score at 1-all in the first, the Alta team shoved two markers across in the second and maintained the lead until the finish. A desperate Tavernette scoring spree in the ninth enabled the losers to climb within a run of knotting the score, but McKinley successfully halted the uprising.

A feature of the game was the sensational fielding of Woerth and Contra, first baseman and third baseman, respectively. The winners collected seven hits off Cervinski's slants. The Tavernette pitcher secured the only extra base hit—a double in the ninth. Both moundsmen struck out six.

Indians Gather Power

Hal Trosky Rejoins Club Battling Boston For League Lead.

BOSTON — (AP) — The Cleveland Indians gathered strength today in the midst of a three-game fight with the Boston Red Sox over first place in the American league standings.

The Indians are on top after winning the first game 6 to 1 but only half a game separates the two teams in the percentage column.

Hal Trosky, regular first baseman, was to rejoin the Tribe today after a five-day absence due to illness of his infant son.

Catcher Frankie Pytlak, the season's champ major league holdout, accepted the club's $8,000 salary offer over the weekend and awaited only formal reinstatement to eligibility to put on his Indian uniform.

The best news to the players today was Mel Harder's announcement he is ready to take his turn in the pitcher's box, certain the spring stiffness is gone from his skilled arm. He pitched in batting practice yesterday.

Trosky's return sends Beau Bell, who covered first base, back to the bench but Bell's bat has been so effective that many fans expect him to appear in the outfield.

Willis Hudlin drew the call for today's pitching chore for the Indians. His scheduled opponent is Emerson Dickman.

Bob Feller won his third victory of the season in Sunday's game. He had plenty of fire and never was seriously threatened. His bat helped by rapping out a triple, allowing him to score on a fly.

The Indians got to Maurice (Mickey) Harris for two runs in the second inning and three in the third before he was relieved, and they coasted the rest of the way. Third Baseman Ken Keltner led the Indian attack with three hits in three official times up.

* * *

Boston's only run came in the fourth inning when Doc Cramer doubled and Ted Williams singled. The Sox made seven hits off Feller.

Stout Shoots Sub-Par Golf

Mansfielder Collects 71 on Possum Run Course.

Mansfielders who played the Possum Run course appeared to be in mid-season form yesterday, as a number of linksmen turned in scores below 80.

Jim Stout led the pack by completing the 18 holes in 71 strokes, one under par for the course. John Carr wasn't far behind with a 73, while Lawrence Deley and Al Kushin both turned in 75's.

Miss Harriet Roth captured high scoring honors for women golfers by shooting a 94. No unusual scores were posted at either Westbrook country club or Coolridge yesterday.

Service Team Beats Shelby

Registers 2 Softball Wins At Empire Field.

The Service Taxi softball combine opened its season yesterday by chalking up a pair of triumphs over Shelby at Empire field. Taking the first game, 22 to 9, the Taxis came back to win the second by a 4 to 2 score.

Miner, who handled the mound duties in the initial tilt, aided the Service team's cause with three singles and a home run. The Taxis pushed 11 runs over the plate in the first frame to turn the contest into one-sided affair. Beck of the Taxis also secured four hits.

* * *

Scoring four times in the first frame of the second tussle, the Service outfit, behind Livensparker's three-hit hurling, grabbed a lead it never relinquished. Dusty hit a home run for the winners.

Find Offense Best Defense

Minneapolis Making Old System Look Good.

MINNEAPOLIS — (AP) — The high-powered Minneapolis Millers are making a timehonored system —a good offense is the best defense —look plenty good these days in the young American Association baseball race.

The Millers fell on three Louisville pitchers yesterday for 16 hits, representing 32 total bases and included five homers. Even with all this power they barely clipped the Colonels, the final score being 9 to 8.

Indianapolis climbed back into second place a game behind the Millers with an 11 to 6 victory over St. Paul.

Ed Cole was the standout of Toledo's 3 to 1 triumph, setting Kansas City down with nine widely scattered hits, walking none and striking out three.

Columbus and Milwaukee split a doubleheader. Francis Barrett tossed a fivehit shutout for the Columbus victory in the first game, 6 to 0, and Buck Marrow pitched steady seven-hit ball for Milwaukee's 7-2 edge in the seven-inning nightcap.

Luck Sticks Close

Has Aided Reds in Copping Last Two Tilts; Top Giants, 3 to 2.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Lady Luck not only is holding her guiding hand over the Cincinnati Reds, but in the last two games she has carried them around the bases in an armored chariot, the Giants and Phils will testify.

Two errors gave the Reds a 3-2 victory over the Giants when things looked darkest for Manager Bill McKechnie's crew yesterday. A 11th inning wild pitch by Kirby Higbe Saturday enabled Cincinnati to score the winning run in a 3-2 triumph over the Phils.

Yesterday it was First Baseman Norman Young and Catcher Harry Danning who gave the Reds their opportunity in the seventh inning with the Giants leading 2 to 1.

Mike McCormick got to Hal Schumacher for a single. Bucky Walters forced McCormick and then stole second and Bill Werber walked.

Lonnie Frey grounded to Nick Witek and Young dropped the throw to first, allowing Walters to score, Werber following when Danning dropped the ball.

That was not all. Danning's throw to third to stop Frey hit Umpire Larry Goetz but it was the total of evens on the scoreboard and enough for Cincinnati to win.

Prince Hal held the Reds to seven hits, Walters allowing the Terrymen an equal number of safeties and stacking up his fourth straight victory.

Junior Thompson will face the Giants in their second encounter today with Harry Gumbert pitching for the New Yorkers.

Merchant Girls Score Victory

Defeat Ashland Provident Loan, 13 to 3.

Mansfield's Merchant Girls' softball team inaugurated their season Sunday by defeating the Provident Loan Girls of Ashland by a 13 to 3 score.

* * *

Home runs by Lipul and Holda, and three-base smash by Shuster accounted for most of the Merchant Girls' scoring. Whiteman's fielding was a big factor in holding the Ashland team down to three points.

The Merchant Girls used all four of their pitchers.

CHAPTER 1

BROOKE arrived at Manhattan's busiest hour. Following a red-cap, who carried the whole of her possessions in two shabby suitcases, she glanced at the moving throngs with dark eyes, excited and challenging. As she hurried, the collar of her brown sport coat buttoned high, a brown boyish felt hat over her dark hair, her black coat (her best coat) over her arm, her eyes took swift excursions to the women about her swathed in luxurious furs with absurd little black hats over perfectly coifed heads. Rod saw women like them every day, amusing women, poised, successful women. Rod. . . . Her thoughts scattered and raced ahead of their reunion a few hours hence, an eternity for her.

A few moments later, from a taxi window, New York at February dusk, its gay night lights beginning to blink and glitter, enchanted her. This time no train would take her back to the quiet New England town, her home, after a too brief week-end with Rod in New York. For this time, though Rod didn't know it yet, she had come to stay.

At the entrance of a moderately priced hotel the doorman sprang to attention and a boy hurried out for her baggage. She felt a blast of wintry wind, then the warmth of the lobby. On the register she wrote, "Miss Brooke Carter, Chatham, New Hampshire," and followed the boy to the elevator. As she stepped on she regarded her reflection in the mirror impersonally but with a smile, thinking, "So this is the girl Rod Westover is going to marry! She has a smudge on her face." A young artist who had come to New England to paint one summer had told her that her hair was the color of smoke. The expressive dark eyes were warm and alive though they had not been always, one guessed, as happy as they were now.

The room was small and cold and the narrow little bed seemingly inadequate after the huge four-poster in her bedroom at home. "I must learn to live in small rooms," she thought.

"Is there anything else?" the boy inquired politely

"No. Nothing, thank you," wanting him to go so that she could call Rod.

When he went, she did not stop to take off her coat or hat or gloves but went directly to the telephone and called Rod's office and waited anxiously, so afraid that he would be gone for the day.

But when a voice said merely, "Hello," she was afraid and anxious no longer.

"This is Brooke!" The room was warm now. Would the sound of his voice reduce her to a bundle of nerves and emotions?

"Brooke?" incredulously. "Where . . . Why . . ."

"Here in New York," and laughed lightly as she gave him the name of the hotel. Then, "I didn't write you because there really wasn't time. And there were things I wanted to say and not write . . . tonight." If he said he couldn't see her tonight . . .

"Tonight?" with some uncertainty. "Oh, yes, of course. In about an hour. I've got to stay around awhile." Then with less uncertainty and more cheer, "Until then, darling."

An hour is interminable to one in love who waits. . . .

Since they were children together in Chatham, going to the same school, the same church, the same parties, skating together in winter and swimming together in summer, her life had been colored and shaped by the dark-haired, dark-eyed boy who lived in a house as big and as shabby as her own house just a block away from his. She could smile now at the doubts and uncertainties of a much younger Brooke as to the depths of Rod's feeling for her, her sharp silent hurt when she had seen him with another girl, and his failure to see her as frequently as she wished to see him.

And though uncertainties and doubts are never entirely eliminated, the nights had been less tormenting after, when she was sixteen, he told her that he loved her and she had come to be regarded, to the chagrin of several Chatham boys, as Rod Westover's 'girl.'

Twice tragedy had struck. Rod's father died suddenly and to support her son and herself and keep her home, Rod's capable mother Grace had rented rooms to transients, to retired old men and to disagreeable old ladies who could not live amicably with their children. That her tireless efforts to please her odd assortment of paying guests had been profitable was seen when Rod went to a western university from which he had been graduated three years ago. And Rod's going away to college was still remembered most vividly not only because his going was tragedy in itself to Brooke, but because her mother died two days after he had gone.

From a bright summer to the bleakest winter of her life she went that year, comforted only by Rod's letters and more perplexed at the problem of her father, a melancholy, pessimistic man to whom she had never been close, than by any of her own. And though she accepted with secret relief a year later his announcement that he was going to marry Helen Bailey, who had taught school in Chatham for twenty years, Brooke knew that the home would never be quite her own home again.

When her thoughts went back, it seemed to Brooke that her life, since Rod went west to college, had been devoted chiefly to waiting. Waiting for Rod to come home on long holidays, waiting for his letters, waiting for his graduation.

Long before he told her, she had reconciled herself to the fact that he would not settle permanently in Chatham and make one of the plants or mills or small business houses his career. Nor had Grace been surprised, Brooke knew, when Rod announced that he had a position with a large corporation in New York in which he was making rapid progress.

Nothing she had ever done was important except where it concerned him. Certainly her job as secretary to Chatham's busiest physician had never been important, a job from which she had resigned without regret three days ago to accept another very different kind of job in New York.

She understood Rod and loved him and admired him though there were people in the town, including her father, who thought that he had become a hopeless snob. From her father, too, sarcastic remarks that Rod would never marry her had cut deeply.

But far from feeling that Rod had outgrown the town and the people he had known all his life, and that he resented the slow tempo of their conservative, satisfied lives, she admired the ambition and sacrifice that had won him honors in college and the determination to succeed in business. Those who disapproved of him, she thought, lacked his energy and brillance and foresight.

A handsome boy but never gay or abandoned, intense, often moody, Rod had a giant plan for his life and it was enough for her to be part of it. Also quick to defend him was Grace, his mother, touchingly proud of him.

It was the summer after his junior year in college that he had asked Brooke to marry him. They had been sitting beneath a cluster of trees beside a lake with a picnic lunch spread before them on a gay red cloth when, without preface, he asked her.

And she had said, "You know I will, Rod."

And he had said, "But not until I'm established and making enough to support you properly." They had said a great many tender, ardent things that afternoon. His arms held her in a fierce embrace, their lips had clung often. A passionate and beautiful day to remember. Thereafter, she felt, they would always be bound.

For three years now she had come down to New York on week ends whenever her budget would permit, Grace occasionally coming with her. Rod shared what his mother considered a scandalously untidy apartment, with lanky, drawling Jim Bartlett who had also shared his room in college and who had a position as accountant.

But there were many week ends she did not see Rod, and last summer disappointment had almost made her ill when he wrote that he would not be in Chatham for his vacation this year because Mr. Glass, an important executive whose name Rod breathed with reverence, had invited him to an ocean fishing trip on his yacht, and it was an invitation he could not afford to refuse.

Nor had he come home for Christmas this year, business taking him west. It had been three months now since she or his mother had seen him.

Of his life in New York, apart from his work, Jim and the small apartment, she knew nothing and did not, since he did not tell her, question. That he worked hard and for long hours she knew, Jim having said often, "He's a glutton for work, that guy. He'll be president of the whole works someday." But a thorough knowledge of Rod, as neat in his thoughts as in his appearance, moral, health-conscious and ambitious, had given her an unshakable faith despite her father's frequent remark that. "Rod probably has a score of girls in New York." Moreover jealousy of the torturing sickening kind had been conquered the first year he was away to school.

Though she had no tangible symbol of their engagement —only the still fresh memory of words and kisses on a summer day several years ago—she hoped each time she saw him that he would set a definite time for their marriage. For each time she returned to Chatham after a week-end in New York, Helen always asked, "Have you and Rod set the date?"

Loving him, she was patient and excused him, wondering at times if Rod did not consider that his first obligation was to his mother and that he must, since Grace was periodically in poor health, relieve her of the responsibility of the boarding house and provide adequately for her before he could marry. That obligation Brooke recognized and respected.

But how long would they go on like this, she had been asking herself more and more of late, seeing each other only in crowded restaurants and night clubs, dancing a little, talking a little, dashing to the station on Sunday afternoon to her train? It could not go on indefinitely. They were losing what they would not be able to recapture.

Lifting her head, she looked out. It was quite dark now. May she always feel like this, glowing inside, her hands a little weak, in anticipation of his coming. But the time! Glancing at the old-fashioned gold watch on her arm, she saw that she had but half an hour in which to dress. Clothes were important. How often she wished that they were not, that she cared less, that Rod cared less.

The half hour slipped away while she dashed under the shower and brushed her hair and put on a black silk frock with a rhinestone pin at the throat, taking infinite care as she pulled a ridiculous little black hat over her right eye. White gloves. Her black coat brushed. The mud of New Hampshire removed from the tall-heeled black suede pumps. Would she ever feel perfectly "turned out" to meet him?

Waiting, she thought, still waiting as she looked at herself critically in the dressing-table mirror, disregarding the small straight nose and generous mouth, cherry-colored, forgetting that the same young artist who had called her hair the color of smoke had also said that it was the shape of her skull that made her beautiful and that she had a face for ecstacy and faith. Her thoughts scattered again. . . . Her father's saying, "I hope you aren't making a mistake, Brooke. You're taking a good deal on yourself to do this." Grace's saying, "I think it's a wonderful idea Give my love to Rod and tell him, please, to come home soon even if it's only for a day." But invariably her thoughts came back to the moment when she would step from the elevator downstairs to a tangible Rod, close enough to touch.

The phone had rung only once when she picked it up.

"I'm downstairs, Brooke," Rod said.

"I'll be down in a moment."

SOUTH AFRICAN CENSUS BOOKED

Plans Already Under Way for Nose Count Scheduled to Be Taken In 1941.

JOHANNESBURG (INS)— Preparations for the next South Africa census, to be held on May 6 next year, are already being made.

The census will have many important new features and will include the entire population of the Union, which is expected to be more than 10,000,000. Eight hundred enumerators will be employed.

One of the new lines of inquiry concerns the literacy of the native population, and also the next extent to which natives are being married in accordance with European traditions.

A conference between representatives of the Union Government, the Southern Rhodesian Administration and the protectorates of Bachaunaland, Swaiziland and Basutoland has just been completed in Prestooria. All these administrations will work in close co-operation.

The 800 enumerators propose to visit every farm, every hut and every dwelling in the Union, as well as to explore the remotest spots in the country to get the census as accurate as possible.

HEALTH TAUGHT

Education of Both Teachers and Pupils Conducted.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Development of a health program in which the Cleveland Academy of Medicine and the Cleveland public school system will co-operate is underway.

The program, developed by Dr. Paul Moto, chairman of the academy's educational committee and F. R. Bemisderfer, science curriculum teacher, is one of the first of its kind in the country, and calls for health education for both teachers and pupils.

Under the program science teachers would be lectured on the latest developments in medicine and surgery by academy members, and lectures on public health problems would be broadcast to pupils' science classes.

Dr. Moto proposed that pupils be asked to answer questionnaires designed to determine what health problems puzzled them. The questionnaires would be unsigned, Dr. Moto said.

THEATERS

Mother-Daughter Rivalry.

The story of "It's a Date," starring Deanna Durbin, concerns a famous Broadway actress and her daughter, played by Kay Francis and Miss Durbin, who are offered the same role in a Broadway show. In addition they become rivals for the romantic interests of a Hawaiian pineapple planter, portrayed by Walter Pidegeon. Deanna's boy-friend, played by Lewis Howard, also figures prominently in the complicated but ingratiating proceedings. The locale is in Hawaii. This picture is showing at the Ohio theater through Tuesday.

Merle Oberon In Lead.

What happens when a girl who is afraid of the future, meets a man who is afraid to face his past, is the theme for the picture showing at the Madison theater. Co-starred in "'Til We Meet Again" is Merle Oberon and George Brent, with Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Binnie Barnes and Frank McHugh in the supporting cast. A gay comedy "An Angel From Texas" is the second feature with Rosemary Lane, Jane Wyman, Ruth Terry, Eddie Albert, Wayne Morris and Ronald Reagan in the cast.

Two Exciting Dramas.

"Destry Rides Again" with Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Brian Donlevy and Mischa Auer in the cast, is showing at the Ritz theater. The feature attraction is "Remember?" headed by Robert Taylor, Lew Ayres and Greer Garson. Miss Garson plays the role of Linda, a young modern, who falls in love with an ambitious young executive, played by Taylor. After their marriage an old friend, Lew Ayres comes to their rescue in their matrimonial muddle.

Horror With the "Cat"

The mystery comedy, "The Cat and the Canary," starring Paulette Goddard and Bop Hope, opens Tuesday at the Majestic theater. Foreboding atmosphere holding promise of dire events to come, keynotes the picture from the beginning. The second feature is "They Shall Have Music," with Jascha Heifetz, the world-famous violinist, as a guest star. In the supporting cast is Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Gene Reynolds and Walter Brennan.

Two Popular Series.

"Blondie On a Budget," newest of the series based upon Chic Young's popular comic strip, is showing at the Park theater. Rita Hayworth is the rival who comes to the Bumsteads to stir up trouble with Blondie and Dagwood. She is an old flame who returns to "singe" Dagwood. The Gleasons, Jimmy, Lucile and Russell, with Harry Davenport in the large cast present the Higgins family in "Grandpa Goes to Town."

RAILROAD PAYS

Kentucky Road Shows Profit 37 Straight Years.

CADIZ, Ky.— (UP) —Its name is almost as long as the road, oldtimers in this home state of Casey Jones say, but the Cadiz railroad continues to make its own way and profitably serve the shippers who send freight rolling over its 10 miles of line.

Long after the nation's larger railroading concerns had acquired the myriad short roads with such names as Paragould Southeastern, Jonesboro, Leachville & Arkansas Southern, the Cadiz railroad continues to operate independently.

For the 37th consecutive year, the corporation finished "in the black."

It's a wonder that museums haven't made offers for the two engines that roll over the rails each day, for even the engineers and firemen of the little "iron horses" admit that they are something to smile at when compared with the modern streamliner.

The motto of the Knights of the Order of the Thistle in England is "No one provokes me with impunity."

LEADING STOCKS CRAWL THROUGH NARROW GROOVE

Steels, Aircrafts Among List Attracting Support; Business News Fairly Hopeful.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks crawled through a narrow groove in today's market.

Attracting support were U S Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Du Pont and General Motors.

Mixed trends prevailed among bonds, commodities and foreign securities markets. The British "free" pound sterling weakened in terms of the dollar.

Business news at home was fairly hopeful.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the Magazine "Steel" which said heavier bookings of sheets and strip at price concessions withdrawn May 1 had been mainly responsible for improvement in production activities

Encouraging was the forecast of the bureau of agricultural economics that farm income in the first half of 1940 would be higher than in like period last year

'KEY' SYSTEM

Editor Describes How Accurate Surveys Are Made.

A "fool-proof method of measuring reader interest on local and national questions was described yesterday by Frank Maloy, editor-manager of the Lorain Journal, sister paper of the Mansfield News-Journal, at the 13th annual meeting of the Blue Pencil club of Ohio, organization of newspaper editors.

Maloy told the gathering that through a careful sampling system 75 "keys," either persons or families, were established, and that through these "keys," results of elections and other issues could be forecast accurately.

The club elected R. R. Peters, managing editor of the Bucyrus Telegraph-Forum as president; Edwin Schoenleb of the Canton Repository, vice president, and Norval Neil Luxon of the Ohio State university journalism school, secretary-treasurer.

The first printed book in the English language was turned out by William Caxton in 1477. It was called "Dictes and Sayengis of the Phylosephers."

MASSED TROOPS ON FRONTIERS SPREAD ALARM

Balkan War Crisis Heightens as Germany-Russia Send More Border Forces.

working for both France and Russia.

Foreign diplomats, drawing their own conclusions from these developments, sent pessimistic reports concerning the situation to their governments at home.

Western Front.

Providing an obligato to the mounting thunder in southeastern Europe were events on the western front, where fighting surged for the third successive day around French outposts in the Saar sector.

The French high command noted "marked activity" of artillery and advance units in this region following a series of determined but unsuccessful local thrusts by the Germans.

British naval and land forces were reported to be tightening the seige on beleaguered German troops, numbering between 3,000 and 4,000, at the Arctic Norwegian port of Narvik, in a desperate attempt to counter the loss of prestige suffered in the Allies' withdrawal from south and central Norway.

At the same time, the British admiralty acknowledged the loss of the 1.870-ton destroyer Afridi, sent to the bottom by Nazi bombers while convoying Allied troops out of Namsos.

Destroyer Sunk.

The Afridi carried a crew of 219. The sinking of the destroyer marked the 47th British naval loss of the war announced by the British.

Two of the attacking bombers were said to have been shot down by British warships.

In Berlin, the German high command reported that British artillery forces had been strengthened in the northern Narvik region—the Allies' last foothold in Norway—but said no more intense fighting had developed so far.

The German high command said that "one enemy battleship" was hit by a heavy bomb and that Nazi war planes raided troop concentrations and exploded a munitions dump there.

Britons Critical.

In Britain, demands for a more vigorous prosecution of the war rose in advance of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's scheduled appearance in the house of commons tomorrow to explain the Allied withdrawal from Central Norway.

There was a growing clamor for changes in the government and the tenor of press comment indicated the Chamberlain cabinet was facing its severest test. Well-informed sources, however, seemed to feel that Chamberlain would carry the day after a stiff fight.

The British war office remained noncommittal on developments in Norway, but issued a brief communique denying German claims that Nazi bombers had sunk a British battleship and a cruiser off the Norwegian coast Friday.

Norway's foreign minister, Dr. Halvdan Koht, arriving in London with Defense Minister Col. Biger Ljundberg, counseled his invaded nation in a radio address to have faith in the Allies and said they were honor-bound to give her "full aid."

Sofia Holds Fate Of Balkan Countries.

By PERCY WINNER
(INS Staff Correspondent)

ROME—The fate of southeastern Europe and the course of the European conflict will be decided during the next few days at Sofia, Bulgaria, International News Service learned today.

Well informed circles revealed that a dramatic duel upon which possible extension of the war to the Balkans depends is reaching a climax in the Bulgarian capital, where the ace German negotiator, Dr. Karl Clodius, is struggling to checkmate the pressure brought by Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugesson, British ambassador to Turkey.

Reports from Sofia interpret the radio speech of Bulgarian War Minister Daskoff as meaning that a choice between the Allies and the Rome-Berlin axis is imminent. In his speech the war minister said:

"Bulgaria must be ready to fight for her liberty and independence."

It was pointed out that Italy is playing an important role in furthering Premier Mussolini's policy of preventing spread of the conflict.

Strong Influence

Italian influence is not only strong dynastically—Queen Ioanna of Bulgaria is the daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy—but also diplomatically through Signor Magistrati newly appointed minister to Sofia who is a brother-in-law of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister.

It is believed in Rome that England is bringing desperate pressure upon Bulgaria to counteract Britain's failure to obtain Turkey's permission for the Allied fleet to enter the Black sea through the Dardanelles. Likewise Britain has been unable to obtain a Turkish promise to participate in a stroke by the Allies' near-eastern armies against Russian oil wells in the Caucasus, it is said

Italian circles said they were highly doubtful regarding the possible success of a British maneuver to obtain permission of Bulgaria for transit to Rumania of Anglo-French troops which might be landed at Salonika or elsewhere in Greece, which is now considered a "pawn" of London.

Italy is remaining calm but vigilant trusting in the competency not only of the forceful diplomacy of Magistrati but on the preparedness of Italian military establishments in Libya the Dodecanese islands and Albania.

It is impossible to confirm reports regarding strengthening of Italian forces in the Dodecanese islands but Italian reaction to the arrival of Anglo-French warships in the eastern Mediterranean unmistakably confirms Rome's confidence in its ability to accept any challenge to Italy's vital interests. One of the most important of these interests is maintenance of peace in the Balkans.

for three weeks) has been taken. German 'security forces' have been established from Roeros to the Swedish frontier."

It said that a British submarine, damaged by a mine in the Kattegat, had been sighted by German airplanes, which alighted and took off the captain and a non-commissioned officer. Later, the communique said, the submarine was towed to an unnamed harbor.

It said that two British planes were shot down near Terschelling, on the Dutch West Frisian islands in the North Sea, and that two British flying boats, anchored off the north Norwegian coast, had been damaged by machine gun bullets from German planes.

BERLIN —(AP)— British detachments cut off from the main expeditionary force when the Allies abandoned the Norwegian port of Namsos have been spotted by scouts in a region north of Namsos, authorized sources reported today.

The report of the bombing of another "enemy" battleship gave new impetus to the wave of optimism among the German public.

Much of this optimism had been inspired by the high command's statement Saturday that German dive bombers had sunk a British battleship, a heavy cruiser and a 12,000-ton British transport ship off Namos. The reported sinking of the battleship (denied by the British admiralty) led Germans to believe that the question of superiority of airplanes over surface craft had been decided in favor of Germany's air fleet, and that the end of the war was in sight.

Battleship Sunk, Boast of Goering.

BERLIN — (AP) — Air Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, bemedalled man of the hour of the Norwegian blitzkrieg, proudly announced yesterday the feat which he and Adolf Hitler had charged the German airforce in Norway to achieve at any cost—the sinking of a British battleship by air bombardment.

In all, formal Nazi statements said, nine British warships or transports were sunk or badly damaged during a day of attacks by bombers and battleplanes off Namsos and Narvik, western Norway, yesterday, while the British fleet was transferring Allied troops who have abandoned central Norway.

Beside the battleship, these were stated to include a heavy cruiser of the class of the 8,250-ton York, "sunk in thirty minutes" by heavy bombs; a second cruiser and two destroyers bombed and damaged, and 12,000-ton transport sunk, all off Namsos, plus a battle cruiser, a cruiser and a transport bombed (but not sunk) at Narvik

Informed British sources in London described the German claims as "of a fantastic character to which the public fast is becoming accustomed."

ROEROS FALLS TO ADVANCING GERMAN FORCE

were broken and telephone and power lines were torn down.

There are no air raid shelters in Roeros. Civilians began running out to the hills in disorder.

Bomb splinters embedded themselves in the walls of the wooden houses. My room, which I left after the raid to telephone, was littered with debris and there were several holes in the walls, caused by splinters.

I suffered slight abrasions on my arms from flying wood fragments.

The German troops reached Roeros at 1 p. m. and entered without resistance. So far as I could see the first unit included only between 25 and 30 men, on motorcycles.

It was reported that 200 Germans had been killed when they were trapped in a narrow pass between 20 and 25 miles north of Roeros and that the Germans machine-gunned the village of Glaamos, nearby, in retaliation.

It was reported also that the Germans took 20 leading citizens of Os, south of Roeros, as hostages, warning that they would be shot if any resistance were offered. According to these reports the Germans also said that for each German soldier shot by civilians, one civilian would be shot.

Norwegians expressed belief that the bombing of Roeros was in retaliation for the killing of between 40 and 50 Germans around Os.

As I telephone this I can see German soldiers riding through the streets on their motorcycles. I do not know where they are going but I know I am going to try to get to the frontier on the double quick.

It is 2:45 p. m. as I telephone what will probably be my last call from Roeros before the Germans put the exchange under their control.

Five German soldiers are standing five feet from me as I phone. They are in the main room of the exchange and I am in a booth. I do not need the booth because these soldiers do not understand English. I have spoken to the Germans, using very poor German, and smoked their cigarettes. These German soldiers hardly seem to know what it is all about and I am not enlightening them.

CHURCH ROBBED

Irreverent Safe-Cracker Gets $200 Elyria Collection.

ELYRIA —INS— Some irreverent safe-cracker today had all of the $200 collection taken up at yesterday's services in the First Congregational church.

Miss Elizabeth Rich, church secretary, found the safe rifled when she went to the church office today. The outer door of the safe had not been locked, but an inner door was forced by the thief.

COSTLY BACON

CHARLESTON, S. C. (UP)— If modern housewives feel disposed to grumble at the current prices of food, they should let their grandmothers tell them the prices they paid back in 1863.

A letter written by Capt. Samuel McKittrick of the Confederate army while in camp at Charleston to his wife in Greenville county says that bacon was selling at $2.60 a pound and that butter was $5 a pound.

GROUND BROKEN FOR BUILDING OF SHELBY GIRL SCOUT LODGE

SHELBY — Approximately 100 Girl Scouts took part in the ground breaking ceremonies for their $4,000 lodge at Seltzer park Sunday afternoon.

Several hundred relatives and friends of the scouts witnessed the program.

Short talks congratulating the scouts on their project were given by Mayor W. R. Morris, Miss Eleanor Bond of Mansfield, district scout executive; and S. D. Inscho, Seltzer park board president. Scout Commissioner Mrs. Robert Green presided over the program.

Mrs. Robert Bussom, who broke ground for the lodge, thanked the Shelby citizens who supported the building drive last year. Mrs. Bussom, founder of Girl Scouting here and leader in the move for the lodge, was assisted with the ground breaking ceremonies by two charter members of the Shelby Girl Scout troops. They were the Misses Jean Ann Pemberton and Judy Fitzgerald.

The program was opened with the convocation pronounced by Rev. Michael McFadden, pastor of Most Pure Heart of Mary Catholic church. Songs, the Scout promise and laws and a flag ceremony followed in charge of the Girl Scouts. Rev. A. B. Allison of First Presbyterian church said the benediction at the close of the service.

In charge of the program arrangements was a committee of two members of Shelby Girl Scout council. Mrs. F. L. Gump and Mrs. Howard Skiles were the scout executives planning the affair.

A day camp will be held at the lodge as soon as it is completed, which is expected to be next month. Final arrangements have not been made by the officials for the camp which is expected to be held three days a week over a three-week priod.

START FIRE DRILL SCHOOL

SHELBY — A drill school for volunteer and regular firemen will be started by Shelby fire department this month, Fire Chief Eugene Schull, who will instruct the school, announced today.

The school was planned by the firemen last year when an ordinance was passed by city council to give volunteer firemen $1 a night for attending the classes.

AKRON —(AP)— Striking CIO-United Rubber Workers reinforced picket lines at the General Tire & Rubber Co. today to forestall any back-to-work movement. Approximately 1,100 workers have been idle five weeks in a strike over wage rate grievances.

her battered body was found along a lonely road in "Spook Hollow" at 2 a. m. Sunday.

After attending a movie in Bellefonte Saturday night, Miss Gates drove the two girl acquaintances to their homes in her car and was returning to her own home in the neighboring village of Mt. Eagle when overtaken by her assailant.

A young man who had been visiting Fay's sister, Lois, at the Gates home found the body on his way home. Miss Gates' clothing was torn and blood-stained and she had been beaten on the head with a blunt instrument. An autopsy disclosed she was criminally assaulted and her skull fractured in five places.

No weapon and few worthwhile clues came to light in the Taylor case. Miss Taylor, daughter of a Wildwood, N. J., fish dealer, was slain March 28 upon returning to college from an Easter vacation at her home. Her abdomen was mutilated, but physicians could not say definitely whether she was raped.

IN WRONG BED

NEW PHILADELPRIA, O.—(U.P.) — Charles W. Baker of nearby Dover, O., asked for accommodations at the New Philadelphia jail one night "so he wouldn't have to make the walk home."

He was permitted to sleep in a cell. During the night he rolled off the top of the cell block, fell seven feet to the floor, and died of a fractured skull.

THREE HURT IN TWO-CAR CRASH SOUTH OF CITY

Mother in Critical Condition; Father and Daughter, 9, Slightly Injured.

A Columbus woman was brought to Mansfield General hospital critically injured last night, only a few hours after she had been there visiting a relative who had been hurt in an automobile accident earlier in the evening.

She is Mrs. Edward C. Platt, 41, who was hurt while en route to her home with her husband and their daughter, Ruth, 9, when their car collided with one driven by Orley Wright, rear 312 Sturges avenue, Mansfield.

The three Columbus people had been at the hospital, visiting Mrs. Charles Kochheiser, 46, R. D. 1, Lexington, who suffered a fractured left leg when the car in which he was riding ran into a ditch at 5:15 p. m. on Route 42, south of Johnsville. Mrs. Kochheiser is a sister of Platt.

The Platt car came to grief on Route 42 in the village of South Boulevards about four hours after the first accident.

Their car struck the one driven by Wright, according to state highway patrolmen, as Wright passed a car driven by Wayne Hunter, R. D. 2 Greenwich, as Hunter slowed down to turn off Route 42 into Beechwood street.

Mrs. Platt suffered a fractured skull, fractured left jaw, fractured pelvis and had several teeth knocked out. Her husband, 44, suffered chest and knee injuries. Their daughter suffered leg and eye injuries. Wright was not hurt. Hunter's car was not involved in the accident.

The Platt and Kochheiser accidents were the only ones reported in the Mansfield area over the week-end. For Ohio, the week-end death toll in traffic accidents was seven.

ASSERTS NAZI OIL GOOD FOR TEN-YEAR WAR

German Fuel Dictator Points Out It Will Not Be Squandered.

BERLIN—(INS)—"As far as oil is concerned, Germany could carry on the war for another ten years, but, of course, we are saving fuel wherever we can, because it would be foolish to squander it."

This statement was made to foreign correspondents by Major-General Von Schell, Germany's fuel dictator under Field Marshall Hermann Goering.

Von Schell, who was recently appointed Under-Secretary of the Ministry of Communications also holds two other important posts. He is in charge of the entire motor traffic of Germany and is special Motor Commissar under the Four-Year-Plan Administration.

Major-General Von Schell also claimed that the export of motor cars increased considerably as a result of a wholesale reorganization of the automobile industry.

"In the first ten days of March," von Schell stated, "Germany exported more cars than during the entire months of January and February.

"Also I may state that another hard winter like the one we witnessed now will not be likely to cause any havoc for the German traffic system. We have learned how to overcome such difficulties in the future."

Von Schell attributed much of the success of the reorganization of the motor industry to the elimination of an over-abundance of car types in Germany. This drastic cut was completed just when the war broke out.

Asked whether Germany was going to introduce wood-gas to a larger extent, the major-general replied that no large-scale changes were contemplated along those lines, mainly for practical reasons. Such a gas would not be available in all parts of Germany.

Major-General Von Schell was in charge of the motorization department in the German general-staff before he was appointed to his present important functions.

CINCINNATI— (UP) — Juvenile delinquency records are advanced as proof that placement of low income families in a wholesome environment will lead to character development among children.

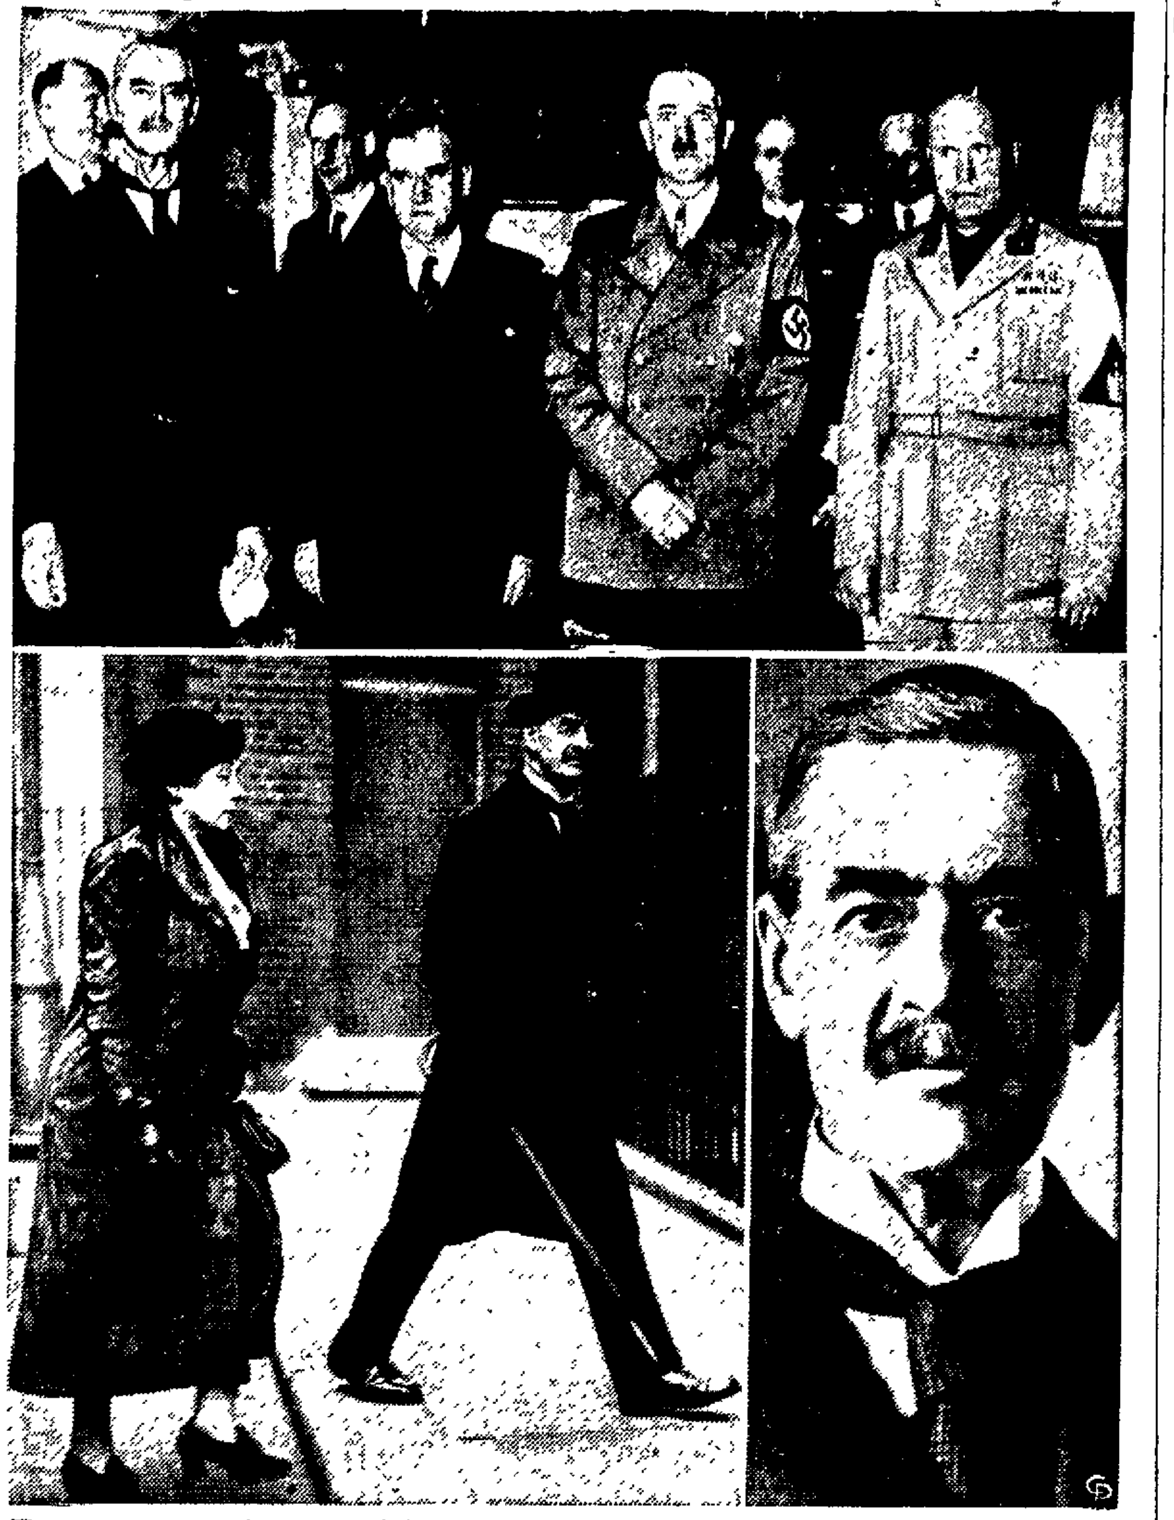
Norway Failure Threatens Chamberlain Rule



The government of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain may fall as a result of the failure of the Allied attempt to dislodge the German invaders from southern and central Norway. Criticism of the Chamberlain government's conduct of the war by public, press and parliament has increased. Pictures above show, top, the historic conference in Munich, Germany, at which Chamberlain mistakenly thought he had assured peace for Europe for "our time." BRITISH WOMEN PASS UP UNION

LONDON—(UP)—After a year's search for a woman with ambition to be a British trade union official, the executive committee of the Railway Clerk's Association in Britain has reported that they have failed to find a suitable woman.

They were given permission to stop the search after they had reported, "The number of applicants was so small that we could not conscientiously appoint any of them."

So W. Scott, general secretary of the association, will have his salary raised by $500 to make up for the lack of a woman assistant.

TOWNS IN NEED OF PLAY SPACE

Commission Says Ideal Setup For Community Includes Recreation Spots.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — (UP) — Plenty of space to play is a necessity in an "ideal" town, in the opinion of a public recreation commission headed by Dr. Kirtley F. Mather of Harvard university.

"The ideal setup for a town of 10,000," the commission said, "would include at least six to eight neighborhood playgrounds which should be directly connected and adjacent to the elementary schools.

"Every junior high school should have from eight to 10 acres connected or adjacent to the school. And the standard for the high school should not be less than 20 acres—which of course, includes an athletic field."

Each playground would include a section designed particularly for small children and would be fenced in. Besides the playgrounds, the commission said, "each town should have a recreation park of about 200 to 250 acres. In this layout there should be a lake and the territory should be chosen with a hill and brooks, or a river."

The commission also suggested that the "ideal park" in an "ideal town" should have at least two or three standard baseball diamonds, eight softball diamonds, 20 tennis courts, 20 game courts, 40 sand gardens, one large archery range, five to 10 acres suitable for gardening, a 10-to 20-acre pond for skating, boating and swimming, and two sanding beaches.

Sons of Marion Pastor Follow His Footsteps

MARION—(AP)—The four sons of Dr. Harry L. Bell, pastor of the Central Christian church here, are following in their father's footsteps by preparing for the ministry.

Three of the youths, Raymond, 23, Wayne, 20, and Winston, 18, are students at Transylvania college, Lexington, Ky. The fourth, Keith, 17, is a junior at Marion Harding high school.

A family milestone will be reached May 19. On that date Dr. Bell will observe the 25th anniversary of his ordination with services in his church inducting his eldest son, Raymond, into the ministry.

All three Transylvania students are prominent in campus affairs of the Disciples of Christ denomination school and have earned better than average grades. The trio was elected this year by student vote to the court of honor, held each spring during traditional Pioneer's day festivities.

Wayne is president of his class and fraternity chapter. Since his sophomore year he has held student pastorates, a privilege rarely extended to undergraduates of the school. He plans to continue studies leading to a Bachelor of Divinity degree after June graduation.

"Speed wins in motor-cycle racing! Slow burning wins in the cigarette field!"

says JIMMIE KELLY, Champion Motor-cycle Racer and Enthusiastic Camel Smoker

ON A MOTOR-CYCLE I GO FOR SPEED IN A BIG WAY, BUT I KEEP MY SMOKING ON THE SLOW-BURNING SIDE WITH CAMELS. THAT WAY I GET A LOT OF 'EXTRAS'— IN MILDNESS, COOLNESS, FLAVOR—AND CAMEL'S SLOW WAY OF BURNING MEANS EXTRA SMOKING PER PACK

ON THE FAST SIDE—A 50-mile-an-hour skid, and Jimmie Kelly (No. 43) whips into the lead on the ocean beach at Daytona. On a motor-cycle Jimmie Kelly is a riding champion, but when it comes to cigarettes, this record-breaking driver is on the slow side . . . the slow-burning Camel side.

CHAMPION Jimmie Kelly (left) is just one of thousands of experienced smokers who have discovered that Camel's slower way of burning means several definite advantages. Being slower-burning, Camels are free from the drying, uncomfortable qualities of excess heat. They give you extra mildness and extra coolness . . . always so welcome. Slower burning makes the most of the full, rich flavor of Camel's costlier tobaccos. Camels give you extra flavor . . . don't tire your taste. The extra smoking in Camels is a matter of the smokers' experience as well as of impartial laboratory record. So get more pleasure per puff and more puffs per pack. Get Camels.

SMOKERS:

SAVE THE COST OF THE STATE CIGARETTE TAX

Smokers who live in communities where certain state cigarette taxes are in effect can save the cost of the tax—and, in some instances, more—through smoking Camels. (See panel at right.) When you are a Camel smoker, you get this unique economy—and all the extra enjoyment of cooler, milder smoking—the fragrance and delicate taste of finer, more costly tobaccos.

"ON THE SLOW SIDE"—That's Jimmie Kelly's way—and the way of millions of other smokers—of saying that he prefers the slower-burning cigarette...Camel. "That's where the 'extras' are in cigarette pleasure and value," explains Jimmie (above).

SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVE YOU—

EXTRA MILDNESS

EXTRA COOLNESS

EXTRA FLAVOR

● In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

Mansfield News-Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MAY 6, 1940.

The only trouble about letting well enough alone is that it is seldom "well enough."

Now that the snowshovel has been carefully stored away, the lawn mower resumes its place in the sun.

Even as the campaign swings into full blast, it is well to remember that the "iron lung" is intended for an entirely different purpose.

Steel Industry's Central Point

ATTENTION is again being directed to Mansfield as the geographical center of the steel ingot production industry of the United States.

Such a distinction would have little point except for the location here of an important steel industry—the Empire Sheet & Tin Plate company—which makes it interesting to consider this as the hub of a great wheel which represents the tremendous steel industry of this entire country.

The 300-mile spokes of this wheel extend into territory which produces practically all of the raw materials needed by industry and also contains more than half of the entire population of the United States.

The informative series of articles, "What Mansfield Makes," which has been appearing in the Sunday News-Journal for the past ten weeks, gives an idea of the diversification of Mansfield's manufactured products, and accounts in a way, for the ability of this city to go through the depression with less serious effects than were noted in a number of other cities.

In the emphasis that has been placed on Mansfield as an industrial center it should at no time be overlooked that the surrounding Richland county has agricultural resources which have not yet been as fully developed as practicable and that co-operation among residents of rural and urban sections is mutually advantageous.

As a city with a present population of approximately 40,000, with prospects for considerable growth during the next decade, Mansfield's immediate concern is to plan intelligently for the facilities and conveniences that will be essential to a larger city. A city of 50,000 population cannot be successfully operated on plans designed for a community of less than half that size.

Primary Schooling for Grown-Ups

WHILE education, in itself, cannot be depended upon to assure getting and holding a job, it certainly helps in meeting present-day requirements.

Records of the Civilian Conservation Corps show that 80,000 of the young men enrolled were unable to read or write at the time of enrollment but that a program of primary education made it possible for them to read newspapers and write a simple letter before they were discharged.

It was found that three out of every 100 enrollees were illiterates, and it may be assumed that the schooling of many others carried no further than the second or third grade, which seems incredible in a country where free schooling has extended through many years.

Army draft records of the World war period showed the percentage of illiteracy even higher than the C. C. C. figures, indicating that some progress is being made.

With the success of a democracy so largely dependent on the intelligence of its citizenship, and with illiterates enjoying equal voting rights with literates, the importance of furthering adult education among those who received no schooling in childhood can scarcely be overstressed.

The handicap and embarrassment of being unable to read and write are things to which no young Americans should be subjected and the C. C. C. has done a fine work in providing even a little schooling for 80,000 illiterate youths.

Correcting Wrong House Numbers

WHEN it is considered how much inconvenience and confusion has resulted from irregularity in house numbering it seems odd that such a condition has been permitted to exist in Mansfield for the past dozen years or more.

This is one of the proofs of the old saying that "What's everybody's business is nobody's business" and the fact that correction of the mixup has finally developed into a one-man job indicates that the whole thing might have been taken care of years ago if someone had just "set his mind to it."

Many persons who realized that their home was incorrectly numbered didn't know just how to go about it to learn the correct number. Now that the matter is being handled in a systematic way it is anticipated there will be very general co-operation in ridding the city of the "wrong number" nuisance.

Circus Stages a Come-Back

A COUPLE of years ago, when circuses were folding up in mid-season, it was feared that this American institution was about to pass from the scene for good. High costs of operation, labor dissension and competition of newer forms of entertainment appeared to be more than the old-time circus could stand.

But now the picture has changed again. Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey show, which opened in New York about a month ago, reports the best business in ten years. It is setting out on a 16,000-mile summer tour with considerable confidence. There is a tradition that a circus never does well in a presidential year, but 1940 is expected to disprove it.

The reasons behind the decline and rise of the circus in these years will make an interesting story when some one writes it. One thing seems clear: the American people have not outgrown their love for the Big Top and three rings.

Most Dangerous Traffic Hours

THE MOST DANGEROUS traffic period in one city, authorities report, is between 5 and 8 p. m. In the first quarter of this year 28 persons were killed, 11 of them in the three hours named. The next most dangerous time is between 1 and 4 a. m. There were eight traffic fatalities and 44 serious injuries for the quarter in those hours.

In the early evening the fatigue of drivers and pedestrians, after a day's work, doubtless is a contributing factor, along with the twilight and darkness. In the early morning, other causes may operate, including the false notion that it's safe to go very fast because there are fewer cars on the streets then.

These two bad spots in a day's traffic call for special attention and carefulness on the part of pedestrians, motorists and safety authorities.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — That there's nothing new under the sun has become such a trite phrase that anyone who reads may run off at the mouth with it a dozen times a day without getting more response than a casual "ain't it so?"

Nevertheless, ever since the European wildfire burned into Sudetenland and spread to the Finnish forests, reams have been written and more reams talked about "new methods" of warfare. With the German foray into Scandinavia, this talk has broken out anew. Commentators and military observers are at it hammer and tongs.

But Wait a Bit.

ARMIES, guns and supplies, dropped from the skies—marvelous! Thousands of troops ferried by plane across the Skagerrak into suffering Norway—wonderful! The old troop transport system soon will be obsolete. Better start junking the ships. Better start building armadas of the skyways.

Submarines and planes: the brand new way of dealing blitzkreig death. That A. Hitler and his gang—what geniuses! They've made the only really original contribution to warfare in our generation.

Wait a minute before you start passing out any credits—if credit it can be called—to A. Hitler, Stalin & Kamerads, Inc. Let's take a look at three letters dug up by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Letter No. 1, dated 1784 and written by a man who had just witnessed several balloon ascensions: "It appears, as you observe, to be a discovery of great importance, and what may possibly give a new turn to human affairs. Convincing sovereigns of the folly of wars may perhaps be one effect of it; since it will be impracticable for the most potent of them to guard his dominions. Five thousand balloons, capable of raising two men each, could not cost more than five ships of the line; and where is the prince who can afford so to cover his country with troops for its defense, as that 10,00 men descending from the clouds might not in many places do an infinite deal of mischief, before a force could be brought together to repel them?"

The author? Benjamin Franklin!

And That's Not All.

BUT wait. Go back more than 200 years, to 1670, and hear what Father Francesco Lana had to say about an airplane which he invented, but which, because of poverty, he could not build:

"It may be thought that God will never suffer this invention to take effect, because of the many consequences which may disturb the civil governments of men. For who sees not that no city can be secure against attack, since our ship may at any time be placed directly over it and descending down, may discharge soldiers. The same would happen to private houses or ships at sea. And this they may do not only to ships but to great buildings, castles, cities, with such security that they which cast these things down from a great height out of gunshot cannot on the other side be offended by those below."

And that's not all: 170 years before that, old Leonardo da Vinci, drew marvelous plans for a submarine, and in his notes set forth his reason for not making his invention public:

"How by an appliance many are able to remain for some time under water; how and why do I not describe my method of remeining under water for as long a time as I can remain without food; and this I do not publish or divulge on account of the evil nature of men who would practice assassination at the bottom of the seas, by breaking the ships in their lowest parts and sinking them together with the crews who are in them."

So you see if there's anything new under Mars, Hitler, et al., didn't think of it first.

Timely Editorial

War Costs Rise Steadily.

Although the destruction of human life and of physical properties in the European war to date remains small it is an arresting fact that the financial cost to England—and probably to France and Germany—already approximates the top World war figures and that it is certain to rise further. The belligerents are straining to prepare for the active fighting which may or may not develop this year or next.

The British government's present expenditures are at the annual rate of 2.4 billion pounds, or about 40 per cent of that nation's 1939 national income. Proportionate spending by our federal government would be around 25 billion dollars, or some three times the current rate.

As now projected, Britain in two years will have a budget approximating 75 per cent of the 1939 national income. The financial war burdens in France and Germany are certainly proportionate.—Magazine of Wall Street.

BABES IN THE WOODS

Welcome Dewey In Second Place

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Nothing is surer than that Thomas E. Dewey can have second place on the Republican ticket if he wants it. Even if the "Stop Dewey" aggregation succeeds, as it now thinks it will, in preventing his nomination for president, he can have the vice presidency with almost anybody who might be named.

On the other hand Dewey, should he win the first place, will not have as much chance to pick and choose his running mate. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, for example, would much rather run for re-election as senator from Michigan. Incidentally Vandenberg may have a little trouble there in winning renomination, though there would not be much difficulty in winning re-election if he gets by the nomination hurdle.

SENATOR Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, who will probably go into the convention with more delegates committed to him than any other candidate, is also adamant against taking second place. Men who are candidates for the presidential nomination always say they will not take second place, but there is good reason for believing that Vandenberg and Taft are absolutely sincere in their avowed determination to get first place or nothing. As a matter of fact, Vandenberg could have had the vice presidential nomination four years ago had he wanted it. The Landon people did not turn to Frank Knox until they were sure they could not get either William E. Borah or Vandenberg.

Both Vandenberg and Taft, moreover, have told friends that, if they should win first place, they would like to have Dewey for second. Both appreciate keenly the hard-hitting oratory of the New York prosecutor. President Roosevelt himself has often discussed the strategy of having the burden of campaign oratory taken over by the candidate for vice president rather than the head of the ticket. He has pointed out that Theodore Roosevelt did most of the talking in the 1900 campaign, when William McKinley was the head of the ticket.

Franklin D. Roosevelt himself did much more talking than James M. Cox in the 1920 campaign, when F. D. R. was the vice presidential nominee.

In the last two campaigns, of course, Roosevelt has been the chief speaker on his side, John Nance Garner not being given to speechmaking. But on the Republican side four years ago Knox did five times as much spellbinding as Alf M. Landon.

THERE would be another advantage to whoever might head the Republican slate, assuming it should not be Dewey, in having the New Yorker as the vice-presidential nominee. That would be to have the presidential candidate take a very dignified position—above partisan bickering—but let Dewey pepper the administration and the New Deal generally in his irritating, prosecutor sort of fashion.

Dewey has shown he can hurt with his punches. Roosevelt's reaction to Dewey's "defeatism" speech in Minneapolis has been exceeded only once—when the aviators appeared before a congressional committee labeling themselves a "Lobby to Save Lives."

The presidential candidate is restrained a bit in what he may say by what the most conservative element of the electorate will regard as "fitting." No such inhibition need worry the vice-presidential candidate.

Health and Diet

What We Gain From Soft Drinks.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the composition of soft drinks and their nutritional value?

Most soft drinks of the bottled variety contain from eight to 10 per cent carbohydrate, making a bottle yield about 100 calories, which is equal to about a slice of bread. Dissolved in the drink is carbon dioxide gas, which makes it fizz. This probably causes it to get from the stomach to the intestines in shorter time and it is in the intestines it is absorbed and quenches thirst. Hence the carbonation is an advantage on thirsty days.

Soft drinks, unless specifically stated, contain no vitamins or minerals.

Vitamins in Drinks.

Fresh grape juice contains vitamins B and C. Natural orange juice is a splendid source of vitamin C; so is tomato juice. All natural fruit juices (lemonade, etc.) contain citric and other acids which give the characteristic flavor but which are immediately turned to alkalis or buffer substances in the blood and do not increase the acidity of the body.

Buttermilk contains no fat if it is of the skim variety, but whole buttermilk contains about four per cent fat, which doubles the caloric value. It is a fine source of calcium and phosphorous. The sourness is caused by some benevolent bacteria, which may be good for constipation.

Iced coffee has only the nutritional value of the sugar contained in it. Its reviving effect is due to caffeine, which increases the blood flow through the heart, kidneys and brain.

How can one disguise the taste of disagreeable medicine?

Some medicines are disagreeable because the doctor wants them to be, and that is part of their property. Bad medicine, as everyone knows, had a good effect of its own. The old doctor's idea of a good medicine is set down in the classic definition that it should be "dark brown in color and bitter as gall."

The medicines that need to be disguised are the cathartics—the salts and castor oil.

The best way to disguise the salts is to make them effervescent. Effervescent salts of magnetism sulphate (epsom salts) or sodium phosphate, which are the common forms of salts, are obtainable from any pharmacist. They can be best taken in ice cold lemonade.

The most successful way, I think to take castor oil so as to disguise the taste is to make a sandwich of the oil between two layers of very cold liquid.

Squirrels' Granary

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

FOR the last two weeks I have watched each afternoon a broad rough nest of sticks, stringy bark and leaves settled securely in the crotch of a straggly old dead white oak. It may have been a crow's nest once, but it is no more, for I have not seen that sable bird about this place within a year. It was not the home of the whitefoot mouse, for no sheltering roof was built. To make sure I tapped upon the hard-shelled trunk but no such little creature scrambled out.

A hollow chestnut log lay near, with a large bulge in the middle. The entrance was no more than two inches in diameter and slightly worn. Testing out a theory of my own, I thrust the end of a maple branch into the bulgy part. It seemed as though I had dug into a measure of wheat or corn. The contents was dry and grainy.

The next day I brought my ax and chopped a block out of the hard horny top of the bulge. Thrusting in one hand I felt cold seeds and pulling out beechnuts as clean and dry as if they had been stored in a granary. I sampled some and found them good, but I took no more. Then I cut a block as nearly as possible to fit the hole I had made and sealed the uneven places with dirt and leaves before I went away. There may have been a bushel of nuts in there. No wonder the little hole at the center was so well worn.

I suspected a relation between the nest high in that crotch and the store in the hollow log. Yesterday I watched the surface of the nest through field glasses, and after nearly an hour my patience was rewarded. I made out the movements of four tiny furry heads. They had thin little ears and occasionally a long bushy tail would move into view beyond the outer wall They were playing, kitten-like, unmindful of the height 30 feet above the ground. They frisked about on the smooth barkless prongs that supported the nest.

I did not see the mother then—perhaps she saw me first. But far down the wooded glen, a little later, I heard a red squirrel bark and chatter so that the very woods rang with her impudence. Her insolence prompted me to wonder; for revenge, how many song birds nests she had robbed that morning and how many eggs and newborn fledglings she had devoured for her breakfast.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The Pullman company and the New York Central Railroad may not know it yet, but they are in for some trouble with the justice department over the wreck of the Lake Shore Limited, which killed 30 people the other day when it failed to take a curve near Little Falls, N. Y.

Strange as it seems, it is the anti-trust division of the justice department which is investigating the wreck and may take criminal action.

It may seem a long jump from safety precautions to trust-busting, but what hard-hitting Thurman Arnold of the anti-trust division is interested in is the monopoly operations of the Pullman company.

His investigators are checking up on whether the Pullman company was using top-heavy cars which could not make the curve, instead of new-low-slung cars. Particularly, justice department investigators are checking on whether the Pullman company is working in conjunction with the Brill car manufacturing company to hold down the production of low-slung cars because of the glut of top-heavy cars already manufactured.

If after proper investigation, the justice department feels that it has a case, the matter will be placed before a grand jury.

Johnny Moves Up.

JOHNNY ROOSEVELT, youngest and only merchant son of the president, has been promoted.

The Filene department store in Boston, for which he went to work several years ago as a stock boy, has made him manager of a new branch in Winchester, Mass. This is one of the most rock-ribbed Republican strongholds in New England. Out of a population of 16,000 there are only 400 registered Democrats.

Despite the town's ardent GOPism, Johnny, according to sales records, is doing very well. Personally popular, he is proving a big attraction not only to the townsfolk, but to outlying customers.

Note—More than any of the other Roosevelt children, Johnny resembles and takes after his mother.

Garner's Manager.

EVERYONE knew about the two telegrams sent by Sam Rayburn and young Representative Lyndon Johnson to settle the row between Texas Garnerites and the Roosevelt third terms. However, there was more to those telegrams than appeared on the surface.

Only insiders caught the significance, but those two wires also disclosed that E. G. Germany, state Democratic chairman and tough-talking leader of the "stop-Roosevelt" bloc, had been bounced as manager of the Garner campaign.

There was no formal announcement. The Garnerites said nothing about it and neither did the New Dealers, to whom Germany has been a red flag for months. But the tip-off was the way in which the telegrams were addressed.

They were sent to "Myron Blalock, Garner Manager." This was the first time this title had been applied to him. In the past, the title "Manager" has been used exclusively by Germany.

Germany's exit was one of the chief demands of the New Dealers and a big victory for them. Blalock, former state chairman and smart politician, is a middle-of-the-roader. He is a close friend of Garner and Rayburn and at the same time on good terms with the New Dealers. He has been for Garner, but not for Germany's "stop Roosevelt" tactics.

Another victory of the New Dealers was the assurance that all their leaders—including Under Secretary of Interior Alvin Wirtz, Lyndon Johnson, Maury Maverick, and others, would be given places on the Texas delegation to the convention.

Also, the compromise choice picked to head the Texas delegation was Rayburn. Soft-spoken Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones busily angled for the place, but the inside boys in both camps preferred Rayburn as the more popular and "safer" choice.

Roosevelt's Successor.

A STRIKING revelation of what the president is thinking about his job and his successor was given at a recent White House press conference.

Roosevelt was talking about government reorganization, and made the point that there should be simplification of administration in order to relieve the chief executive of handling reports from a multitude of agencies.

He said that he spent more time reading reports than any president within the memory of man, then added an expression of confidence in his own endurance. Most people, remarked the president, could not do it.

Here a newsman threw in a question with a third-term inference: "Do you know anybody else who could do it?"

Roosevelt's reply was an inferential comment on the capacity of an older man to carry the burden—that he was afraid some people would die under the strain. But he added an alternative—that they might do as some other presidents have done; namely, just avoid doing the work.

Diplomatic Orphans.

THE group of diplomats "Without-a-Country" is steadily increasing. First was the Austrian minister, then the Czech, then the Albanian, then the Polish ambassador, now the Danish minister, next the Norwegian, and soon, perhaps, the Swedish.

The Austrian legation surrendered to the Germans, but the Czech did not. This makes Col. Vladimir Hurban the dean of this group of orphan diplomats. He turned the Germans away from his door 13 months ago and has maintained the Czech legation in Washington ever since.

Everybody wonders how Hurban holds on. The answer, in part, is that he is frugal. Before the crisis, when he was receiving for salary and entertainment a monthly check of $1,200 to 1,500, he gave no parties and saved his money. Since the crisis he has cut expenses and drawn on the savings of the past.

He reduced the size of the legation staff in Washington, also of the consulates in other cities. He cut salaries to a common level. Everybody in the legation and consulates gets $100 a month, plus $25 for each child, up to a maximum of $200 a month. Hurban himself gets only $100 a month—the same as the clerk in the New York consulate.

He can keep himself going on this pittance because of past saving. He pays no rent because the building belongs to the Czech government, and he pays no taxes because as a diplomat he is exempt.

Official expenses are met largely through contributions from Czechs in this country, also from increased consular fees. And costs have been cut by closing the chancery—a group of offices annexed to the legation—and setting up offices in the legation proper. No lights burn unnecessarily anywhere in the building.

ALTERNATE GETS HIS CHANCE AT CAA TRAINING

First Flight Instruction Due to Start Late This Week, Harrington Says.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

With only one "washout" among the 10 pupils selected to participate in the Civil Aeronautics Authority's civilian pilot training course when they appeared before a medical examiner for physical examinations, one of the five alternates moved into the select group.

He is Stanley Bosko, Mansfield, who rated 11th in the recent ground school exams. Bosko will replace Perry E. Draper, Perrysville, whose eyesight did not meet the rigid government requirements.

With the five alternates expected to go before the medical examiner early this week for their tests, the class personnel will be completed and sent to Washington.

Return of the certified list from CAA headquarters will signal the way, probably this weekend, for first flight instructions, James R. Harrington, airport manager and the government's instructor here, said.

Completion of the ground school opened the way for 24 of the 39 students who were not among the first 15 in the final tests to continue the study of aviation on their own.

Two of the students, Miss Betty Comboy and Doyt Stober, Shelby, enrolled at the airport this week for flight instruction. Betty took her first lesson in the air yesterday.

It was a busy day at the field yesterday. The two training ships were aloft from dawn until dusk as students practised take-offs, landings, banks and turns under Harrington's direction.

Among this group were Ralph Shelton, Charles Silsby and William Kich, all of whom hold solo licenses and who are "brushing up" and getting in all the hours they can before their scheduled examination for a private pilot's license comes up this month.

CAA Inspector C. C. Bullock, Cleveland, is scheduled to be in Mansfield May 16 to conduct the written exams and flight tests for the group.

Passage of the tests will allow the pilots to take passengers up.

With the help of a kindly weatherman, airfield attendants this week hope to get the runways rolled and in such shape as that all the kinks will be taken out of the surface. Arrangements have been made with the county to use their 12-ton roller to do the job.

It's about all the improvements that will be made immediately unless the NYA comes through with an okay on the $40,000 proposal that has been laid before them.

At a meeting with Mayor William J. Locke and Murray D. Shaffer, division highway engineer, at Ashland last week officers of the Richland county chapter of the National Aeronautical association talked over plans for the establishment of a state roadside park on the route 13 airport frontage.

Included in the NYA proposal, the NYA officers were told that the city would have to deed the land to the state for such purposes. Councilmen have already been contacted and it is expected that early action will be taken.

Paul Gimbel and Charles Silsby took off at dawn today for Boston. They left in Dr. M. C. Oakes' light monoplane which they expect to deliver to him. Dr. Oakes is taking post graduate work at Harvard and expects to fly the ship back to Mansfield when he returns at the close of the school term.

Gimbel and Silsby expect to take the train to Trenton, N. J., where they will pick up a new Luscombe, ordered several weeks ago by the Mansfield Flying club and return in it tomorrow.

Wednesday Dr. Burr M. Hathaway, the General hospital's pathologist, will fly to his home in St. Johns, Mich. He will take as his passenger, Mrs. Jennie Dickerson, his mother-in-law.

Among the visitors who stopped at the port for gas yesterday was a young couple from Palm Springs, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. George Annis. Each was flying a new Luscombe, picked up at the factory in Trenton, N. J. They "gassed up" and headed west after a short rest.

BEST SELLER

Bible Constantly Appearing in New Languages.

NEW YORK —(INS)— The Bible not only continues to hold the record as the world's "best seller" but it is the one book constantly appearing in a new language. Some part of the Bible has now been published in 1,039 languages, 18 new languages being added to the list in 1939, according to a statement issued by the American Bible Society from its headquarters in New York City.

Six of these are African languages, seven of them are spoken in widely separated spots on the continent of Asia, four are in Philippine dialects, and one an Indian language spoken in British Columbia. As almost always, the beginning of translation work in these strange, new languages are in most cases a single Gospel.

In addition to the 18 languages added to the list the translation of the entire Bible was completed during 1939 in the Nandi language, spoken by 100,000 people living northeast of Lake Victoria in Kenya Colony, Africa.

ACREAGE DOWN FOR BIG FOUR CROPS IN 1940

Sweeping Changes on Farms Are Disclosed Through Planting Survey.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Agriculture department reports of planting intentions of farmers this year reveal several interesting and significant shifts in American agriculture.

Most of the changes are attributable to loss of export markets, but others were caused by weather conditions and increased use of farm power machinery in the place of horses and mules.

Cotton acreage has been slashed approximately 40 per cent—from an average of 44,000,000 acres in the 1925-1930 period to an average of 25,000,000 in the past three years. Low prices caused by loss of exports was the principal reason.

Corn Down 20 Per Cent.

Corn acreage has been cut from an average of 110,000,000 acres in the 1930-33 period to an estimated 87,770,000 this year, a reduction of about 20 per cent. That was due partly to improved yields per acre and partly to low prices, as well as fewer grain-consuming work animals on farms.

Farmers boosted their wheat acreage during the World war, and thereafter planted from 65,000,000 to 80,000,000 acres annually. Because of the fall drought which has forced abandonment of an estimated 15,000,000 of winter wheat, the 1940 harvest is estimated at about 46,000,000 acres.

A 21.5 per cent slash in tobacco acreage—from 1,942,000 to 1,524,000 acres—this year is directly attributed to the European war and the virtual shutdown of exports caused by the British embargo on American tobacco.

Oat Acreage Up.

Acreage of oats this year will be slightly larger than last, but 3,000,000 acres below the 1929-1938 average. Farmers will plant 4,000,000 fewer acres in barley than they did in the 1929-1938 period, but about the same as last year.

Flaxseed acreage will be 15 per cent larger than last year; rice acreage will remain about the same, but plantings of cowpeas and peanuts will be about 5 per cent smaller this year than last, the department said.

One of the most marked increases has been in the plantings of soybeans. That crop has sprung from a few thousand acres 10 years ago to the seventh largest farm crop, with an estimated 10,610,000 acres this year.

Not only has there been considerable changes in national acreage of the principal crops, there have been even greater state changes. Several dry years in the South Great Plains have resulted in a sharp reduction in corn acreage and a shift to grain sorghums, which are more drought resistant.

Nebraska corn acrage has declined from a 1929-1938 average of 9,334,000 acres to 6,831,000 estimated for 1940; Kansas from 5,707,000 to 2,984,000 acres and South Dakota, from 4,483,000 to 2,836,000 acres.

FRIENDLY COW

Prize Jersey Helps Farmer Keep Water Bucket Full.

FARNHAM, O. —(INS)— Monkey see, monkey does—but this time it is the story of a cow.

Ona, prize Jersey cow belonging to Lon Miller, many times watched her milker filling the water bucket from the pump in the barn. With longing, big brown eyes she watched the movements of the pump handle and decided to lend a helping hand, or head, without telling Lon.

For over two months Lon was mystified wondering how the water bucket always remained filled and why water kept running over on the cement floor and into the feed trough.

One day while milking the last cow along the line, Lon heard the unmistakable sound of the pump going—and he was positive no one was around.

Peering around the cow he was milking, he saw Ona in all her glory. With the blunt part of her nose, she raised the pump handle in a powerful arc. Then steadily and easily she brought the handle down using her throat. The bucket was full; Ona drank. Then remembering the rest of the herd might be thirsty, she repeated the process, filling the bucket until the water overran into the troughs.

MONTANA TOWN BARS GIGGLING

HELENA, Mont.—(U.P.)—Want to have a chuckle? Then just thumb through the musty volume of "Revised Ordinances of the City of Helena, 1908."

FISHING RIGHTS

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—(U.P.)—Wyoming is a state of pioneer residents who believe in taking advantage of its fishing facilities, the game and fish department has decided.

Officials said they received an average of 50 applications daily for pioneer hunting and fishing licenses issued free to persons past 65 who have lived continuously in the state for 20 years.

Deer Exiled To Dude Ranch For Eating Flowers

BOZEMAN, Mont.—(INS)—Suzy Q, three-legged deer, long a privileged character in Boseman, has been banished from the city for eating flowers.

The animal's two-year stay in the city was ended recently when she was rounded up, placed in city jail, and finally transported to a dude ranch in Gallatin canon — halfway to Yellowstone park—to spend the rest of her life.

The pet deer was found in 1938 suffering from a broken leg. She was taken in and had her leg set in a cast by a doctor.

Since then she has been a familiar figure on Bozeman streets until she decided to augment her regular diet of candy, cake and hay—gifts from city children — with tender young shoots sprouting in city lawns, and was sent into exile.

HATS CALLED SAFER

BOSTON —(U.P.)— Women's hats may be the butt of many jokes, but Prof. A. R. Lauer of Iowa, State college thinks they're fine. The present hats, he said, "set far back on the head and can't very well interfere with the visual powers of women driving motor cars."

"The Williamson Heater Company:
We surely made a very wise decision by choosing a Williamson Tripl-ife furnace. Our home is so comfortable—we use less fuel—we do not have the dirt from the coal and ashes in our rooms—and we do not need to fire it as often. We think the Williamson Tripl-ife furnace surpasses all other heating plants."

Mr. Whatman of Greenwich Wouldn't Be Without Vendol

Well known resident tells how this splendid medicine gave relief from pains in back, arms, and legs by relieving constipation and acting as a diuretic to kidneys.

"Even before I had finished my first bottle of Vendol I could tell it was helping me, so I kept taking it, and now I wouldn't be without it." said Mr. George Whatman, the well know farmer of Greenwich, near Mansfield, to the Vendol Man in Central Drug Store.

"My troubles were due to constipation and need of a diuretic to my kidneys, and this condition kept me full of pains in my back, arms, and legs. Seemed like when I bent over I could hardly straighten up again except with much effort, and pains shooting all through my body.

"The pains often had me up several times during the night, and of course this ruined my rest; then next morning I'd feel like I hadn't been to sleep.

"I was advised to give Vendol a trial, as it seemed to be helping lots of people all around here, so I got some along with a box of the little Vendol laxative tablets, and this combination proved to be exactly what I wanted.

"It gave the most satisfying relief from constipation and acted as a diuretic to my kidneys then my aches and pains just seemed to gradually leave me, and now I'm really feeling fine again.

"I'm glad to praise and recommend such a splendid medicine as Vendol, and I hope that everyone who finds himself in the same condition I was in will get Vendol because I'm sure it will help him, too."

There are hundreds of people living right here in this city and nearby vicinity who have taken Vendol and got the same grand relief as described above, so if you who read this need a reliable medicine like this, you should go to your nearest druggist and get a bottle without delay.

Start on Vendol today. Get the facts about it from the Vendol Man who is daily at Central Drug Store, corner Main & 4th Streets. See for yourself what it will do.—Adv.

Informally Speaking...

May 6, 1940.

Lucy, dear:

Catch your breath and hang onto it—'cause if you do, spring, which seems to have arrived at long last, may decide to stay. . . . And goodness knows we all want it badly enough to put up with the bane of mowing grass and pulling dandelions.

Marianne

Bertha Mae Droz, national president of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, embarked yesterday on a trip that will take her to many of the western states. . . . In her official capacity, she will attend a reception at Hot Springs, Ark.; a convention at Tonkawa, Okla.; another reception in San Antonio, Tex. and a convention again in Long Beach, Cal. . . . On her return trip, Mrs. Droz will be present for receptions and conventions in San Francisco, Cal., Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., Helena and Billings, Mont., Salt Lake City, Utah and Denver, Colo. . . . She is planning to be back May 31, in order that she can leave again on June 3 to attend D. of U. V. conventions in the central states. . . . Incidentally, Lucy, Mrs. Droz spent most of April attending conventions and receptions throughout the eastern states—with stops in Providence, R. I., Boston, Mass., Concord, N. H., Portland, Me., Waterbury, Conn. and St. Cloud, Fla. . . . So I'll wager it would be safe to say that Mrs. Droz is one of the most traveled women of our town—and I'm sure she has seen more of the U. S. than the majority of us, eh, Lucy?

* * * * *

Speaking of conventions and the like, Mrs. B. H. Esgar spent Friday and Saturday in Cleveland as a delegate to the Flora Stone Mather Regional conference, which was held in conjunction with the Alumnae college week-end at the Western Reserve university school. . . . Mrs. Esgar was sent by the Western Reserve Alumni club here, and in addition to special luncheons and breakfasts, she attended classes with senior women. . . . The alumnae accompanied Mather students to classes and various other campus activities in order to get some idea of what the school is doing today.

* * * * *

AND before we leave the subject of conventions, I mustn't forget to tell you that Mrs. M. L. Smith left yesterday for Washington, D. C., where she will represent the Richland County Red Cross at the National Red Cross convention. . . . Going by train, Mrs. Smith plans to return on Thursday.

* * * * *

The morning mail brought me a pretty postcard of the Texas state flower—a field of those perky little blue bonnets. . . . It was from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beidel, who are in that southern state now visiting with their sons. . . . They have been in Wichita Falls with Bob, his wife and baby daughter (this was their first glimpse of the baby), and before coming north, they'll go to El Paso to visit Art and his wife.

* * * * *

MR. AND MRS. W. P. MILLIKIN have just returned from Texas and Mexico, where they've been vacationing since last December—they drove down and spent some time visiting with Mrs. Perry Millikin. . . . Another returning vacationist is L. M. Laughbaum, who arrived in town yesterday following a five-months' stay in St. Petersburg, Fla.

* * * * *

Robert Coe, who has been employed in Detroit, Mich., since his graduation from Ohio State university, was at home this past week-end, visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Coe. . . . Betty Cheney of Detroit was the Coe's house guest too.

* * * * *

MR. AND MRS. JOHN A. BEER can rightfully be proud of their son, Albert, as he was honored last week at Oberlin college. . . . A junior at the school, he was named a member of the top 31 students in his class at the annual Honors Day convocation.

* * * * *

The picturesque Granville Inn in Granville was the scene of the southern Ohio meeting of the National Federation of Post Office clerks Saturday afternoon, and some Mansfielders were in attendance at the session. . . . Mr. and Mrs. John B. Schneider and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bride, jr. drove down.

* * * * *

ALL of which seems to wind up the news for today, Lucy. . . . I'll write again next week and look for a letter from you in the meantime.

Lovingly,

Marianne
